B.C. turning into major funnel for narcotics

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Canadian and U.S. drug officers say the 35-ton shipment of marijuana seized by police northwest of Tofino Tuesday morning may be only a fraction of the amount being funnelled through the Pacific northwest.

Insp. Dave Staples, head of drug investigations for the RCMP in B.C. said in an interview the west coast is shaping up as a major alternate route for drug smugglers in the Caribbean and eastern U.S. seaboard.

"We began to realize about two years ago this was likely to happen," Staples said. "We've seen it manifested in the past year or so with several really big seizures."

They include a 37-ton shipment of marijuana intercepted by U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency officers in Puget Sound in late 1977, a 13½-ton shipment seized by RCMP north of Tofino last July and a large quantity of Thai sticks — a particularly powerful type of marijuana — found by DEA officers on Barnes Island in the San Juan Islands last year.

Tuesday's seizure of 35 tons and the arrest of 20 suspects was the biggest drug bust in Canadian history.

A spokesman for the DEA in Seattle agreed there is growing concern.

"It is certainly valid to speculate that because of the remoteness of the area and from the standpoint of marine attraction, new routes are being established here as the heat is put on smugglers in the Caribbean," special agent Bob Waltz said in a phone interview from Seattle.

"We know the same routes have been used in the past but we haven't enough intelligence established yet to give us an indication of the total amount which may be smuggled into this area of the northwest."

Waltz said an all-out war is being waged to stem the flow, with the DEA enlisting the aid of the Coast Guard, customs, U.S. Navy and even fishing boats to supply intelligence on the movement of smuggler boats plying west coast waters.

Satellite tracking systems are also being used to follow known or suspected smuggler vessels, and although the systems weren't used in Tuesday's case, they were instrumental in the successful police raid in the Tofino area last July 12.

Staples said talks are under way with American authorities to link up the DEA communications network with Canadian watchers.

He said the aim is to develop an early warning system and hinted some thought is being given to planting spotters at strategic points along the deeply indented, rugged shoreline of Vancouver Island.

"We want to get the message across to the dope-pushers in the U.S. and Colombia that we're going to make it very difficult for them in the future."

The task, however, is formidable, he said.

"I know of literally hundreds of places along the coast where even large vessels could come in and be completely hidden from view."

Staples said the Tofino area is a logical choice as a drop-off point.

"If you take a map and try to select an ideal smuggling area on the west coast the first place you'd pick is the area north of Tofino. It's isolated. There's little marine traffic. And there are plenty of places to hide."

Tuesday's enormous drug bust was the culmination of a lengthy police investigation initiated by DEA officers in the Seattle area.

Waltz said officers got word several months ago that a Seattle-based group was planning a large shipment. As a result a surveillance was set up on a mobile trailer home on Orcas Island.

In a raid that was simultaneous with the RCMP swoop, DEA officers burst into the trailer and arrested a man.

Waltz said the trailer was outfitted with a single-sideband transceiver and other sophisticated radio equipment.

The suspect, Roy David Thompson, appeared in court in Seattle Wednesday charged with using a communications facility to

Oak Bay Manor licence cancelled

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

The provincial government has cancelled the interim long-term care licence for Oak Bay Manor, a nursing home which has been attacked for what critics says is the inadequate quality of care for elderly patients.

The move means alternative accommodation will have to be found for 137 patients.

Critics of the manor said today they are happy with the government decision but added the Oak Bay Manor problem is just the "tip of the iceberg" and only one example of the government's lack of planning in the area of long-term care.

The cancellation of the manor's licence stemmed from an investigation by a five-member committee of the nursing home's operation and management.

The committee was made up of health officials from the Capital Region District and the Provincial Adult Care Facilities Licensing Board.

The committee was appointed by Health Minister Bob McClelland following the death Easter morning of two patients who fell out of bed while wearing restraining jackets.

A third women died in January after wandering out onto the roof of the manor.

Spokesmen for Oak Bay Manor were not available for comment this morning.

Maurice Chazottes, ministry of health spokesman, said today Neil Cook, owner of the nursing home, had been warned several times to bring the nursing home up to the requirements of the licensing board.

Cook took no action on things like providing proper fire exits, Chazottes said, so the committee decided the situation could continue no longer.

Chazottes said the problem with Oak Bay Manor, which opened in August, 1972, is that it was built to be a luxury retirement home and doesn't have the proper facilities to take care of elderly people who need attention.

He said the government has not imposed any deadline on when the patients must get out of the manor. The ministry is working on alternative accommodations, he said.

Chazottes admitted that adequate long-term care facilities are in short supply in the Victoria area but added construction has begun on facilities capable of handling 300 patients.

Gordon Hanson, newly elected NDP MLA for Victoria, said today he is pleased that the manor's licence has been cancelled.

He said it will no doubt be an inconvenience for those patients who have to be relocated but in the long run they will be better off.

Hanson said the Oak Bay Manor problem is just the tip of the iceberg.

The problem is the government has not planned its long-term care program.

Now the ministry is in a bind, having to remove patients from inadequate facilities without having alternative accommodation.

Hanson said the NDP will soon be making an announcement on the problem of inadequate hospital care.

Diabetes-virus link discovered in U.S.

BOSTON (AP) — The death of a 10-year-old boy has given scientists the first proof that diabetes in children can be caused by a virus.

The discovery raises the possibility of the eventual development of a vaccine to prevent childhood diabetes, which is usually far more serious than the form of the disease that strikes adults.

Until now, the cause of juvenile diabetes was a mystery, although researchers have long suspected that it might be caused by a virus. Genetic inheritance and weakness in the body's immune system also have been viewed as possible factors.

The researchers who discovered the virus-linked disease are still uncertain whether the germ causes most cases of childhood diabetes or only the rare exceptions.

These scientists, working at the U.S. National Institute of Dental Research and the National Naval Medical Centre in Washington, found that the disease in one youngster was caused by a variation of the Coxsackievirus B4. This is a common virus that ordinarily causes flu and cold-like symptoms as well as inflammation of the heart.

An editorial in the New England Journal of Medicine, which published the study today, called the finding "highly important."

"We now have evidence that at least some cases of diabetes are caused by a virus," Dr. Marshall Austin, one of the researchers, said in an interview.

The form of diabetes that often strikes adults is probably not caused by the newly isolated virus, Austin said. The insulin deficiencies of these people usually are not as severe as those of victims who develop the disease in childhood.

However, he said much more research is necessary before scientists can begin to work on an anti-diabetes vaccine for youngsters.

The editorial, written by Dr. Allan Drash of Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh, said: "Prevention of diabetes may be achieved in some patients by immunization with viral vaccines."

The researchers said the virus attacks the beta cells — tissue imbedded in the pancreas that produces insulin. Without enough insulin, the body cannot keep proper levels of sugar in the bloodstream.

Broadbent, Clark huddle

Times News Services

Hints of a possible Conservative-New Democratic Party deal began to emerge today with reports that prime-minister-elect Joe Clark and NDP leader Ed Broadbent plan a meeting early next week.

Aides said today Broadbent plans no public statement about the position his 26-member caucus is in until after the meeting requested by Clark.

Broadbent returned to Ottawa Wednesday to prepare for the caucus session.

Although Conservatives are six seats short of a majority in the Commons, Clark ealier said he does not intend to negotiate an alliance to get a majority with either the NDP or the Social Credit party; the latter won six seats.

Not so reticent is Social Credit leader Fabien Roy who Wednesday set his conditions for supporting Clark.

Roy said his six Creditiste MPs will insist on Quebec's right to self-determination in constitutional matters, and will oppose any attempt by Clark to introduce federal referendum legislation to deal with Quebec.

"The rights of the provinces must be maintained and even reinforced, says Roy who is an advocate of an association of sovereign states to replace the existing Confederation. "Obviously this includes respect for the right of self-determination for the provinces."

Meanwhile, the process of transferring of power to Canada's new Progressive Conservative government began today with meetings in Jasper, Alta., and Ottawa.

In a secluded Rocky Mountain resort hotel, Clark was undergoing briefings from clerk of the privy council and secretary to the cabinet Michael Pitfield, who ironical-

Fort Street spraying riles environmentalists

The city's parks department began spraying trees on Fort Street today with the pesticide methoxychlor and almost immediately drew the ire of Derek Mallard, president of the Citizens Association to Save the Environment.

Mallard told the Times he had been called by two Fort Street residents who objected to the spraying. One apartment dweller, Mallard said, had reported feeling sick after the wind wafted some of the spray through a window.

Instead of using methoxychlor, Mallard said the city should use biological insecticides to control the winter moths.

Mallard said his trees were infected with the winter moths (loopers) but he controlled them with a spray mixture of an insecticide containing thuricide, garlic juice and ordinary household laundry soap.

Al Smith, the city's parks superintendent, said the program has the approval of the federal agriculture department and the Pollution Control Branch.

While methoxychkor can be dangerous if used in highly concentrated form, the spray dilution is not, Smith said. He said the aim is to control the winter moths,not eradicate them.

He quotes Dr. W. Howard Rapson, a chemist who has spoken out in favor of methoxychlor in the April addition of the Dow Canadian Insight.

N-blast . . . then the horror begins

By WALTER PINCUS

WASHINGTON (WP) — "Areas of the country such as the northeast corridor were reduced to a swath of burning rubble from north of Boston to south of Norfolk. Still there were some sections of the nation that were spared direct effects of blast and fire . . . Charlottesville . . . was not hit . . . Momentarily (it was) immune to the disaster that had levelled the cities of the nation."

But according to a newly released U.S. study by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment (OTA), Charlottesville's immunity is only temporary, a pause before the "race for survival" that will begin the day the survivors emerge from their fallout shelters.

This fictional attempt to describe what the world after a nuclear war would be like makes it clear that the atomic blasts would be only the beginning of the horror.

The study is certain to stir up controversy and become a focus of congressional hearings on the need for increased civil defence measures. It was prepared at the request of the senate foreign relations committee for forthcoming floor debate on the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

The study envisions a massive Soviet nuclear attack that is not a surprise. Tension between the superpowers has prompted some people to flee major U.S. cities, and the day of the attack Charlottesville already has 40,000 evacuees from Washington and Richmond — a 50 per cent increase in the city-county population.

At the first alarm and emergency radio broadcasts most people go into shelters located in downtown underground garages and the basements of University of Virginia buildings. In the rural areas surrounding the city, some farmers do not want to leave their homes, and many suburbanites have stocked their basements with food and piled dirt against windows and doors.

Few are above ground to see the warheads land, but communications nationwide are interrupted as the earth's atmosphere shivers with the assault of the explosions, according to the OTA fictionalized study.

The Soviets have dropped 4,000 megatons, and close to 100 million Americans are killed. The U.S. counterattack on the Soviet Union has a similar devastating effect.

For more than an hour, nothing falls on Charlottesville, and stragglers are hustled into shelters by policemen in the streets.

Then fallout begins. University scientists pick up a 40-rem-per-hour rate an hour and a half after the attack. It quickly rises to 50 rem per hour and remains there for a full day before declining slightly. In four days, the Charlottesville area receives a 2,000-rem cumulative dose, enough to kill those people who refused to go into shelters and most of the animals left outside.

A 450-rem dose is considered to be fatal to half those who receive it. The largest

PLO targets hit

Times News Services

Israeli planes struck Palestinian targets in southern Lebanon today for the second straight day, leaving at least 14 dead and 50 wounded in their wake.

The PLO said the jets hit a school and a refrigerator factory in Damour and "residential targets" and the sponge plant at Naameh. It made no mention of damage to guerrilla targets.

The raids were in apparent retaliation for a guerrilla bombing in Tel Aviv Wednesday that killed three persons. But another bomb exploded in a Jerusalem supermarket today, wounding one person.

The bomb, apparently set by a guerrilla, was placed in a carton of groceries awaiting delivery from the Supersol supermarket in the Ramat Eshkol section of Jerusalem.

Israel's military command said today's raids, the sixth in a month, followed Palestinian artillery shelling of a northern Israeli settlement that wounded two persons. It said all Israeli planes returned safely to base.

Elsewhere, at the Sinai town of El Arish, Israeli troops, under the command of the hero of the Entebbe raid in Uganda, Gen. Dan Shomron, battled settlers refusing to leave their farms in the fierest clash ever between the military and balking settlers.

At least three soldiers and one settler were injured in the fighting before the settlers agreed to leave their fields after being promised compensation for the loss of their land in the treaty with Egypt.

Security sources in Lebanon also said Israeli gunboats shelled the port of Tyre and the Jewish state's artillery bombarded the southern Lebanese town of Aishiye for 50 minutes.

U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, meanwhile, flew to Egypt to take part in the opening of Palestinian autonomy talks between Egypt and Israel.

Sam Taylor dies at 65 of heart attack

Sam Taylor, one of Victoria's best-known car salesmen, died suddenly of a heart attack Wednesday night in his home at 1760 Keith Place.

ly is a close friend of Pierre Trudeau.

Pitfield has for several years served as one of Trudeau's chief advisers and main liaison to the public service and now he must reveal the secrets of government to the 39-year-old Progressive Conservative leader.

Trudeau in Ottawa was meeting with his outgoing cabinet today and his caucus later, prior to going to Government House next week to recommend to Governor-General Ed Schreyer that Clark be called to form a government.

Clark has already indicated to the prime minister that he is in no great rush to return to Ottawa to assume power and the actual transition may not take place until late next week.

Representatives of the outgoing prime minister and the prime minister-elect will meet to arrange a mutually agreeable date for the actual transfer of power. On the agreed date, Trudeau will call on the governor-general and soon after he leaves Clark will be summoned by the Queen's representative, asked to form a government, and the swearing-in of his new cabinet will take place.

MPs-elect will start arriving up at the office of the clerk of the Commons Alistar Fraser, to be sworn in and to be assigned office accommodation next week, after their election writs have been returned. The new Parliament cannot be summoned into session until after June 11, final date for the return of the writs.

Clark however said during the campaign that he does not plan calling Parliament until late September or early October. He faces a very busy summer and wants to take time to get a list of legislation prepared before Parliament is called.

Defeated members of Parliament of all parties also have begun to show up in Ottawa to clear out their offices and pack their private correspondence to be shipped home.

The traditional destruction of documents has also started as ministers clean out private and confidential files. The shredding of documents will go on for a week as potentially embarrassing material that the Liberals do not want falling into the hands of the Conservatives is destroyed or removed.

dose at the Three Mile Island nuclear accident was 0.1 rem.

During the first days after the attack the sheltered people remain fairly calm, keeping in touch by CB radio because regular communications are out. On the third day, however, refugees begin pouring in from destroyed surrounding city areas, many suffering from radiation sickness.

Hospitals quickly fill to overflowing. Hopeless cases are released to die so that those with a chance for life can be attended to. Fallout levels are still too high for anyone to be out in the open more than a few hours without getting radiation sickness.

In a short time hospitals begin to turn away the "very sick" and finally they are forced to lock their doors to protect those patients they have already accepted.

The walking sick move into abandoned homes in town. Many die; their bodies are left unburied for weeks.

After two weeks, local residents tire of the cramped shelter life and begin to return to their homes. Some farmers find their animals dead of radiation or missing — apparently eaten by refugees or other residents.

The president has survived. After national communications are restored, the president announces that the cease-fire is holding and that the country still has submarines capable of striking the Soviet Union again if it launches another attack.

The former local government convenes in the basement of the town hall and establishes a centralized "almost totalitarian rule."

Identification cards are required, and flour, powdered milk and lard are rationed only to those with IDs. Fuel supplies drop so fast that private use of cars and tractors is outlawed. Armed sentries guard fuel storage facilities. Electricity generated by coal is restored but for only a few hours a day. Well water is rationed and given primarily to children; reservoir water remains contaminated.

The radiation level after two weeks is 14 rem per hour, low enough to avoid immediate health risks but high enough to be a long-term hazard. Nonetheless people venture outside, primarily to get food.

In the third and fourth weeks, more people emerge from shelters and the local government requires homeowners to take in refugees, who are still arriving from destroyed cities.

Food problems become more acute and black market bartering develops. Farmers are required to deliver a percentage of their livestock to the town govenment. Some refuse, and occasional fighting breaks out in farms around the city.

Experts decide meat from animals suffering radiation sickness can be eaten. Hunting becomes a full-time activity, though radiation has killed most wild animnals.

Radiation-caused illnesses, complicated by lack of food, increases the number of deaths. Hospitals still cannot care for the terminally ill. Medical supplies have all but been exhausted. Mass graves are established outside the city.

A month after the attack, food riots break out when a truck sent by the reorganized Virginia state government arrives with grain.

Slowly, national, state and local government groups attempt to reconstruct. Young men are asked to return to the cities to help in cleanup. Many refuse to go and attempts are made to conscript them.

Stores and banks remain closed as paper money becomes unusable. Children are confused, reflecting attitudes of their parents, and no one can decide whether or not the schools should be opened.

Spring comes and the scientists are uncertain what to plant. Potatoes and soybeans become prime crops; cottage industries develop, with people making sandals, clothing, soap and candles.

Fall harvests are small. People who had gone back to the city to help in the cleanup return with stories of how the East Coast has been levelled.

In Charlottesville alone, several thousand people die in the first winter after the nuclear attack, and survival is still uncertain.

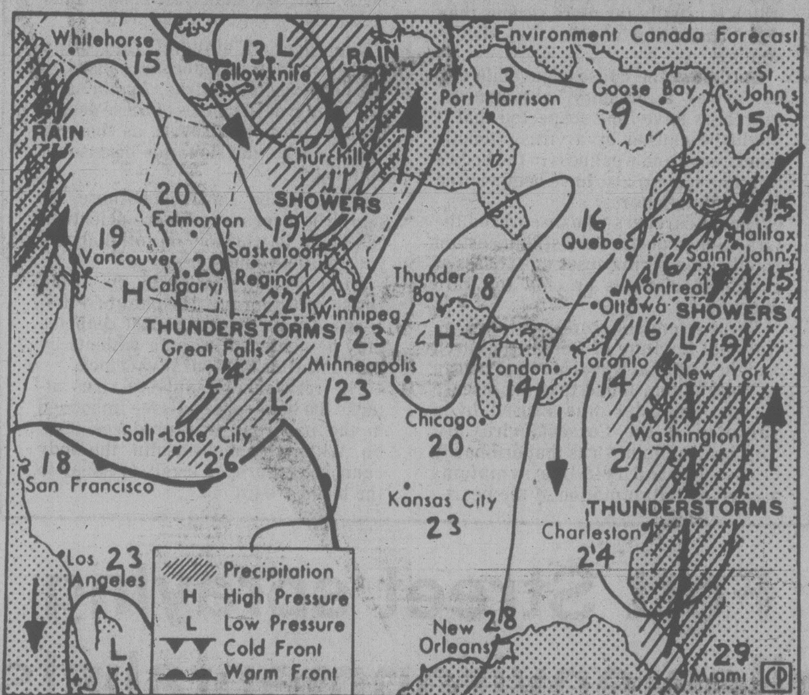

Map valid until noon Friday

A low pressure area over the northern Gulf of Alaska is steering a series of small weather disturbances onto the north coast. Clouds and showers will persist for most of the day over northern areas with low clouds over the south coast breaking up by afternoon. The southern interior should experience mostly sunny skies today and Friday. A slight southward shift in the disturbances will bring more clouds to the south coast Friday with the chance of some afternoon or evening showers.

Doctored photo clue to struggle for Kremlin role?

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. intelligence officials believe a Soviet power struggle over the succession to ailing Soviet Leonid Brezhnev is already in progress as the Vienna summit conference with U.S. President Jimmy Carter approaches.

Evidence of political machinations in the Kremlin was detected by experts here in the apparent doctoring of photographs of Soviet leaders reviewing the Red Square parade during the May 1 Soviet holiday.

One photograph published in Vechernaya Moskva (Evening Moscow) — the local Moscow afternoon newspaper — May 1 did not show Andrei Kirilenko, 72, with group of leaders saluting the marchers along with Brezhnev, Soviet premier Alexei Kosygin, and a host of other leaders.

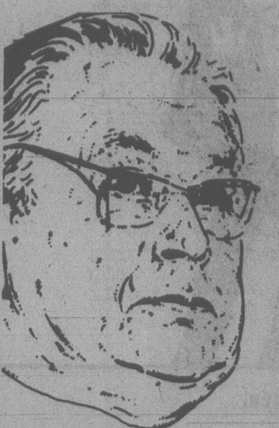
But Kirilenko appeared with the group when the the same photograph was published the next day in Moscow morning newspapers.

Intelligence experts are convinced the photo was doctored, that Kirilenko did not just join the group in the reviewing stand when later frames were snapped from the same angle.

Soviet officials tampered with photographs frequently during the Stalin era but officials here are puzzled why there should be a reoccurrence now.

They speculate someone in the top party apparatus is trying to give Kirilenko a shove towards power, or indicate that he is on the way up.

In Moscow, a spokesman for Tass photos, which took the pictures, denied they were doctored. The spokesman said Kirilenko stepped away from the stand for a few minutes when the first picture was shot and returned for a subsequent picture.



Kirilenko

Experts here believe Konstantin U. Chernenko, 67, has been handpicked by Brezhnev as his immediate successor.

But no one is sure that Chernenko, if he were to replace Brezhnev, would be able to consolidate power or serve only for a transitional period.

In any event, the Carter administration is anxious to nail down the SALT II treaty before any sudden disappearance of Brezhnev from political life.

"I get the impression that the Soviet leadership is really rather fragile at this point," said Paul Warnke, who carried on a major part of the SALT negotiations.

According to some non-government experts, signing the SALT agreement will commit the new generation of Soviet leaders to limitations on Russia's strategic armaments.

Should Brezhnev die or retire without concluding SALT, they believe, the whole pact might suddenly be reopened.

Still other specialists believe that SALT is in the basic interests of both sides, and is so complicated that it could survive a Kremlin power upheaval.

In any event, administration officials here believe the Vienna summit will be worth President Carter's trouble whatever the focus of power in the Kremlin.

Not only will Carter sign the SALT treaty, but he will have an opportunity to make the American position on a wide range of issues known in detail to the power elite of the Kremlin.

The shah and his empress . . . marriage on skids after revolution?

Farah leaving the Shah?

Former empress Farah, wife of the deposed Shah of Iran, has moved out of their home in the Bahamas and plans to leave her husband "for good," according to a report in the London Daily Express. The newspaper, in a Paris-dated story, added in today's editions that the report of a rift between the couple had been denied by their spokesman Mark Morse. The marriage is on the rocks because Farah succumbed to the strain of exile and the daily news of executions in Iran, including those of many friends, according to the report.

The couple attracting much of the attention at the high school prom in Sioux Falls, South Dakota, wore matching light blue tuxedoes, red roses and silver pierced earrings. Randy Rohl, 17, and his date, Grady Quinn, 20, Tuesday night became the first acknowledged homosexuals to attend a high school prom together in the U.S., the National Gay Task Force said. Police were on hand in case of trouble, but aside from a few raised eyebrows, the dance went as planned.

Some characters in the popular Dr. Seuss children's books are based on real people like Adolf Hitler and Richard Nixon, says the author, Theodor Seuss Geisel. Geisel, quoted in the current Parents magazine, said Hitler was his model for Yertle the Turtle. He said Yertle is "a little domineering guy who pushes people around." Geisel adds that he was inspired during the unfolding of the Watergate scandal to write the book Marvin K. Mooney, Will You Please Go Now.

Quake stalls Tokyo bullet

TOKYO (UPI) — A moderate earthquake shook Japan's central Pacific coast today, forcing a temporary halt to operations of Japan's high-speed bullet trains in the area, the Meteorological Agency reported.

The agency said the tremor, which occurred around 3:30 p.m. registered an intensity of 3 on the Japanese scale of 7 in Shizuoka City in Shizuoka Province.

The epicenter of the quake was not immediately known, but it was believed to be located under the sea in Suruga Bay, the focus of a number of recent earthquakes in the region.

Japanese national railways halted operation of bullet trains in the area as a routine mater to check for track damage. the service was resumed after two hours.

Report on H-bomb top 'security breach'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nuclear-weapons expert says declassification of a secret H-bomb report may have been the "most serious breach of security" in the United States since the Second World War.

Obtaining the report "was easier than getting something out of the Library of Congress," a second expert told a Senate energy subcommittee Wednesday.

"At the Library of Congress, they at least check your briefcase," Dimitri Rotow said.

The Senate hearing was called after Rotow, a researcher and nuclear expert, obtained a copy of the report UCRL-4725 from the public section of the government's technical library at Los Alamos, N.M. The government acknowledges that the report contained sensitive information on nuclear bombs.

Dr. Theodore Taylor of Princeton University, a former nuclear-weapons designer, told the committee the report "contains design and performance data related to several past and planned tests of fission and thermonuclear explosives."

"I would be astounded if any physicist (who doesn't already know nuclear secrets) who read this didn't say 'Yes, I now understand how these things work,' " Taylor said.

He called declassification of the report "the most serious breach of security I am aware of in this country's post-Second World War period."

Rotow said obtaining the report was simple. He looked under "H-bomb" in the library's card catalog. "We found a little card that said 'See: Weapons,'' Rotow testified.

Rotow's search for the information wasn't accidental. He went to the Los Alamos library to test security of weapons information as a consultant for the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU).

The ACLU is representing the Progressive magazine, fighting in court for the right to publish an article on nuclear-weapons design.

Boat people in the middle

HONG KONG (UPI) — A British freighter with nearly 1,000 Vietnamese refugees aboard was ordered today to remain outside Hong Kong territorial waters while the government demanded that Britain accept the people, since they arrived in a British ship.

Another 1,500 Vietnamese refugees arrived in Hong Kong waters aboard 13 small boats. They were ordered to remain on board their boats at the western quarantine anchorage.

A government inspection team boarded the freighter Sibonga and counted 982 Vietnamese aboard — 559 males and 423 females, about one-third of them children.

Officials said there were no serious health problems aboard the ship, which picked up the refugees from sinking junks about 100 miles south of Vietnam on a voyage from Bangkok to Hong Kong.

The Sibonga joined another refugee ship anchored off Hong Kong. The Skyluck, with its cargo of more than 2,000 refugees, has been refused permission to land since it arrived Feb. 7.

Salvador Under Siege

SAN SALVADOR (UPI) — El Salvador declared a state of siege Wednesday night hours after leftist guerrillas assassinated the minister of education in retaliation for the deaths of 14 students shot by police.

In an escalation of El Salvador's recent wave of civil strife, police shot and killed 14 students trying to deliver food to rebels occupying the Venezuelan Embassy, gunmen ambushed and killed the education minister, President Gen. Carlos Humberto Romero called an emergency Cabinet meeting and the Legislative Assembly decreed a formal 30-day state of siege.

The latter action, the government's harshest answer yet to the anti-government protests and embassy occupations, meant that all constitutional guarantees were suspended.

The Legislative Assembly, El Salvador's version of parliament, decreed the state of siege after being summoned into special session by Romero, who also called his cabinet into an emergency meeting Wednesday night.

It was the first time since Romero took office on July l, 1977, that his coffee-exporting Central American nation has been placed under a state of siege.

'National criminal conspiracy' cited

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — Eight reputed mobsters have been charged with murder, extortion and conspiracy in an indictment which said state prosecutors "are now prepared to prove in court of law the existence of a national criminal conspiracy."

The 24-count indictment said the men used the organization, which they referred to among themselves "This Thing of Ours" to commit crimes and maintain power between September 1970 until September 1978.

The investigation had focused on Anthony (Little Pussy) Russo, shot to death last month.

Several of the men, according to authorities, are associated with the New York-based crime family once headed by the late Vito Genovese.

The bureaucracy law

There ought to be another law along the lines of the Peter Principle or Parkinson's Law. It should state that every project begun, no matter how small and narrow, has an intrinsic tendency to become larger, more expensive and more bureaucratic as it goes along. A corollary might be that this is especially true of projects that are funded by taxpayers' dollars.

Anyone who requires convincing should examine the educational needs commission set up earlier this year by the Greater Victoria school board. A better example couldn't be found.

It was to be composed of volunteers representing all segments of the community — students, parents, teachers, non-teaching staff within the school district and non-parent taxpayers — under a professional chairman, and was to report back to the school board by October on the educational needs it had discovered within the district.

The commission's report was to be one of the board's tools when it started debate in the fall on the tricky problems of declining student enrolment. Total cost of the commission was to be about $33,000, most of it a $16,000 salary for the chairman. Its other costs were to come out of existing district administration budgets.

From the beginning, however, it wasn't that simple. The process of choosing a chairman took weeks. The process of choosing the other six members of the commission took months and involved much political wrangling.

Now, following the laws of bureaucratic expansion perfectly, the commission is becoming more expensive, time-consuming and more bureaucratic.

The chairman, Bernard Gillie, is looking for $10,000 to hire outside researchers for the commission. The school board administration presumably has neither the time nor the money within its budget to do all the commission wants.

The chairman is also asking the board to provide honorariums for the other commissioners. He says they're spending a lot of time on the job. No doubt they are, but surely they understood it would be a time-consuming job when they volunteered to serve.

(To give the board credit, its planning committee is looking askance at all this extra expense.)

Last but not least, the commission chairman is also saying there isn't any way the commission can finish its work by October. It will probably go on another full year after that, he says.

All this extra time and expense might be worth it if the commission would, in the end, produce something of real value to the school district. We will have to wait many months to find out but a reasonable guess is that it will tell us little that we don't already know, that we have a community deeply split on educational issues, that some people want to save tax dollars and others want to spend more money.

Government is listening

How many times have you complained about the drivers who speed, the drivers who run yellow lights, the drivers whose cars are deafening in their loudness? Sometimes it seems an everyday occurrence on Victoria streets.

Like the weather, bad driving (always by other people, of course) is one of those things we always feel we can't do anything about. Well, here's your opportunity.

Tonight the provincial government's special task force on motor vehicles is meeting to hear the views of the Victoria public. The task force was set up under the attorney-general's ministry several months ago to undertake a thorough re-examination of all the laws regarding motor vehicles and driving in B.C.

It already published an interim report based on its own studies which raises questions about such basic matters as the effectiveness of the demerit point system and the need for tougher penalties for those who drive while their licences are suspended.

Now, as part of the second stage of its work, the task force is going about the province listening to the public and seeking ideas on how to improve the driving laws. Task force chairman Neil McDiarmid tactfully makes it clear that the group doesn't want to hear about individual accidents or run-ins with policemen. He hopes the public will stay with general issues and principles.

That can cover a broad range of topics. Just a few of the issues identified by the task force are:

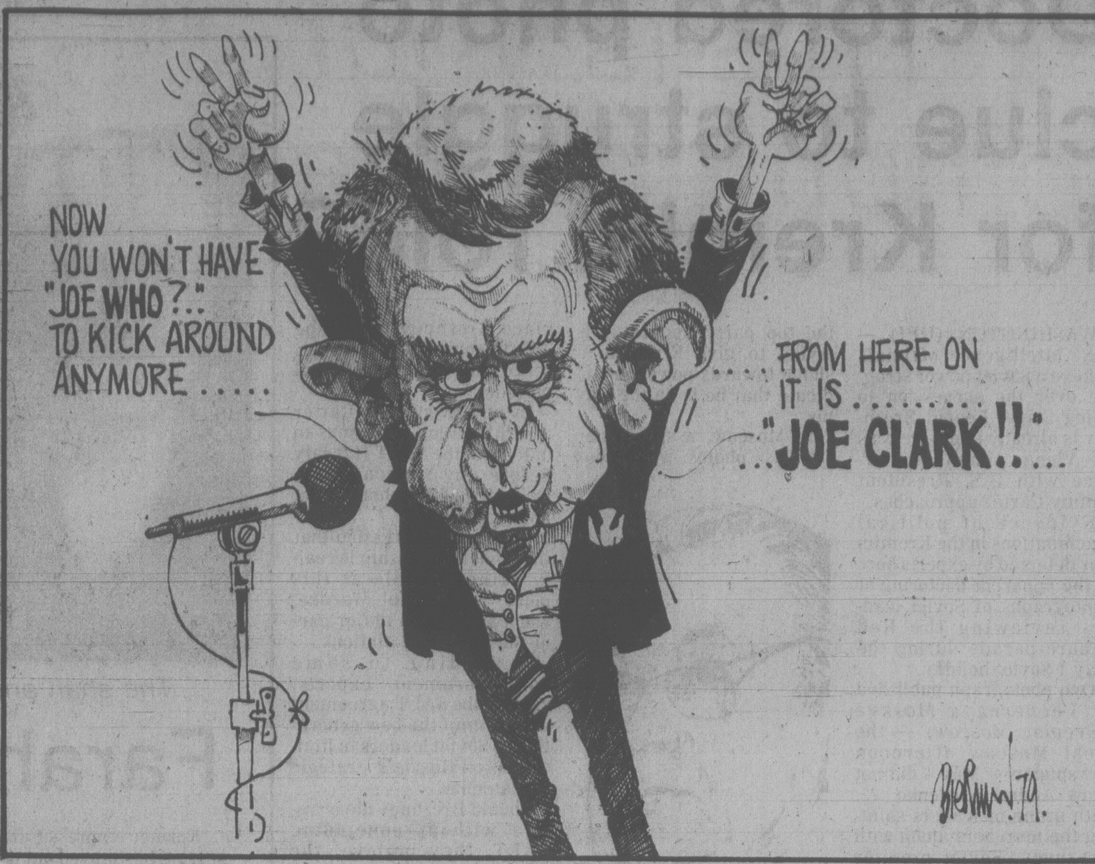
● What should be the minimum age for obtaining a driver's licence? Should the current age of 16 be increased to 18? Or reduced to 14? How about the problems at the other end of the age scale — what should be done about drivers longer capable of driving safely?

● What is the most effective way of dealing with drivers who break the law? Would an automatic fine be a better answer than the present system of demerit points? What should be done about drivers who continually flout the driving laws? Should any driving offences be considered criminal offences, leading to a criminal record?

● How should insurance premiums be related to driving records? Is there a better way than imposing heavy extra premiums once someone has accumulated six or more demerit points? What should be the relationship between the motor vehicle branch and ICBC?

● What about driver education? Should it be mandatory in the schools? Should more incentives be offered to people who complete formal driver education courses?

The meeting tonight begins at 7:30 p.m. at the Ingraham Hotel. The government is listening. All you have to do is speak up.



NOW YOU WON'T HAVE "JOE WHO?.." TO KICK AROUND ANYMORE .....
....FROM HERE ON IT IS......... ..."JOE CLARK!!"...

Amen!

BARBARA McLINTOCK

Ah, those wonderful stats

A few election notes from a statistician, possibly slightly demented following a 57-day campaign:

Looking first at local results, the consistency in voting patterns between the two main Victoria area ridings (Victoria and Esquimalt-Saanich) was remarkable.

In Victoria, Tory Allan McKinnon got 54.7 per cent of the vote. In Esquimalt-Saanich, Tory Don Munro got 54.6 per cent of the vote.

In Victoria, NDPer Gretchen Brewin got 30 per cent of the vote. In Esquimalt-Saanich, NDPer Bob Cameron got 28.9 per cent of the vote.

In Victoria, Liberal Bob Monaghan got 15.2 per cent of the vote. In Esquimalt-Saanich, Liberal Alan Peterson got 14.9 per cent of the vote.

The 1.6 per cent of the vote received by unaffiliated candidate Philip Ney in Esquimalt-Saanich makes up the difference.

Different up-Island

The figures were a little different in the third lower Island seat, Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands, which takes in Mill Bay, Cobble Hill, Duncan, and the Gulf Islands as well as Victoria's western communities. It is interesting that in this riding Liberal candidate David Anderson had been running a strong personal campaign, relying on his own reputation rather than that of his leader or party.

It did him absolutely no good. He gained only about one per cent more of the vote (a total of 16.1 per cent) than did Monaghan and Peterson, both of whom were virtual unknowns when their campaigns started.

The race in that riding was between the Tories and the NDP, with the Tories ending up with 43.5 per cent of the vote to 40 per cent for the NDP.

Further north on the Island, the NDP did pick up two seats (Nanaimo-Alberni and Comox-Powell River), but in neither case did they get a clear majority of the votes. Ted Miller won in Nanaimo-Alberni with 44.0 per cent of the vote, and Ray Skelly took Comox-Powell River with a similar figure of 44.4 per cent.

More interesting was the dismal showing of the Liberal incumbents in both ridings. Jack Pearsall didn't quite make 20 per cent of the vote in Comox, while Hugh Anderson just squeaked past that figure at 21.6 per cent in Nanaimo.

Across the province, the NDP did pick up seven seats, but in none did they gain an absolute majority of the votes. Their candidate who did best was Ian Waddell in Vancouver-Kingsway who gained 44.7 per cent of the votes cast. The two Vancouver Island winners were next in line.

The Tories, on the other hand, gained absolute majorities (more than 50 per cent of the total votes cast) in 10 of the 20 seats they won in B.C. Doing the best was incumbent Bob Wenman who gained 61.2 per cent of the vote in Fraser Valley West. He was closely followed by incumbent Frank Oberle in Prince George-Peace River with 60.6 per cent.

Across the country, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau did the best of the four party leaders in his own riding. He took Montreal-Mount Royal with an amazing 85.2 per cent of the vote.

Joe Clark received 69.7 per cent of the votes in his Yellowhead riding, while the new Creditiste leader, Fabien Roy, got 57 per cent in Beauce in his first attempt at a Commons seat.

NDP leader Ed Broadbent did the worst of the four leaders, gaining just 51.3 per cent of the vote in the heavily unionized riding of Oshawa.

Trudeau's personal victory in Montreal, however, was just one of a number of huge triumphs for the Liberals in Quebec. (It really was the only province where they had any triumphs.) A long series of Liberal candidates gained more than 70 per cent of the popular vote, often in ridings with six or seven candidates. Health and Welfare Minister Monique Begin received 77.3 per cent of the vote in a seven-way race, for example, and incumbent John Campbell gained 75.1 per cent in another seven-way contest.

Even newcomers to the political scene, such as Louis Demarais, took 70 per cent of the vote. Demarais took 71.9 per cent of the vote and had a lead of 36,500 votes over his nearest rival.

Tory Alberta

But if Quebec belonged to the Liberals, Alberta belonged to the Conservatives. Not only did the Tories win all 21 seats in the province, but they also gained an absolute majority in all of them.

And it produced some of the most remarkable majorities of the election. In Vegreville, for example, incumbent Don Mazankowski racked up an incredible 88.3 per cent of the popular vote. That's the sort of lead normally attained only in official one-party states.

But others in Alberta weren't far behind. In Pembina, for example, incumbent Peter Elzinga collected 84.3 per cent of the vote.

The statistics could go on forever, but nothing will change the most important one — the one that gave the Conservatives 136 seats in the 282-seat House, For any others, ask your neighborhood computer.

Here's what Joe Clark and the Tories say they'll do for you

Joe Clark won, and to refresh his and the voters' memories, here's what the Conservatives promised during the campaign and in position papers to do in the first half of the 1980s:

AIR CANADA

☐ Get rid of PetroCan and Northern Transportation Ltd. and other unnamed Crown corporations by selling them to private enterprise. Force Air Canada to sell off the recently-acquired Nordair.

☐ Achieve energy self-sufficiency by 1990.

☐ Punish multinational oil companies which act against Canada's national interest with tighter environmental regulations and income tax investigations.

☐ Abolish the capital gains tax on common shares traded in Canadian companies.

☐ Introduce "sunset laws" and zero-base budgeting to provide annual review of basic government programs, not just proposed increases in spending.

☐ Get rid of the urban affairs department, and other unspecified agencies and departments which overlap provincial jurisdiction.

☐ Bring unemployment down to 5.5 per cent and cut inflation to five per cent by 1985.

☐ Reduce real growth in government spending to zero.

☐ Cut the civil service by 60,000 through attrition.

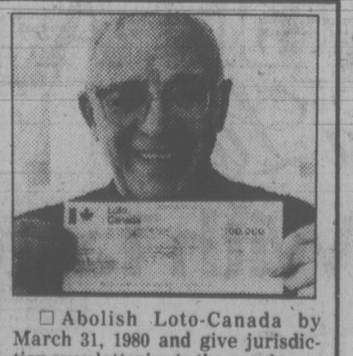
☐ Establish daycare centres in federal buildings and grant civil servants extended child care leaves.

☐ Achieve equality in income and status between men and women in the civil service by 1989. Tories believe in "equal pay for equal work."

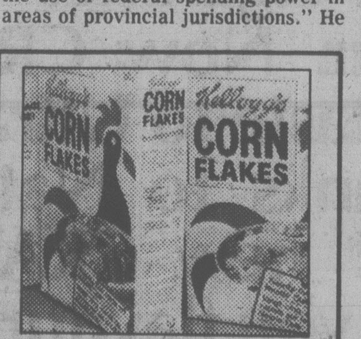
☐ "We will experiment more widely with part-time and flexible work week arrangements" in the civil service.

☐ A Freedom of Information Act.

☐ On the constitution, according to the Kingston Declaration signed by him and the five Tory premiers, Clark wants "a constitutional limitation on the use of federal spending power in areas of provincial jurisdictions." He would also recognize provincial ownership of offshore minerals, share jurisdiction with the provinces for cultural affairs, and entrench the principle of equalization payments in a new constitution.



☐ Abolish Loto-Canada by March 31, 1980 and give jurisdiction over lotteries to the provinces, if they promise to spend a certain percentage on amateur sport or other "agreed purposes."



☐ Change bilingual labelling regulations to allow English- or French-only packaging.

☐ Reduce the government's advertising budget by $50 million a year.

☐ Correct "serious flaws" in gun control laws which threaten legitimate gun owners with "arbitrary and undemocratic action."

☐ Establish a "framework of law" to allow the RCMP to break the law, with prior approval by a cabinet minister.

☐ Set up a Cultural Industries Development Agency to take over much of the Canada Council's work.

☐ Maintain marginal prairie rail lines until 1990, or provide "adequate alternatives" to move grain to market.

☐ Increase Canada's grain export facilities by 50 per cent within five years and modernize grain handling facilities at Vancouver, Prince Rupert and Churchill, Man. Subsidize the railroads if necessary to ensure they make a profit on grain.

☐ Call a national conference for the fall to set economic goals for Canada.

☐ Reform parliament to give the backbencher more influence, and allow Commons committees more independent investigatory powers.

☐ Pay direct subsidies of $1.25 an hour to employers to hire 120,000 young unemployed a year and centralize all youth job creation schemes in a Youth Employment Secretariat.

☐ Set up a national youth service corps of 15,000 young Canadians to work on community and environmental projects.

☐ Encourage national unity with cheaper air and rail fares, especially for the young.

☐ Promise investors a 150 per cent tax credit for new manufacturing investment in the maritimes.

☐ Abolish compulsory retirement at 65 in all fields under federal jurisdiction.

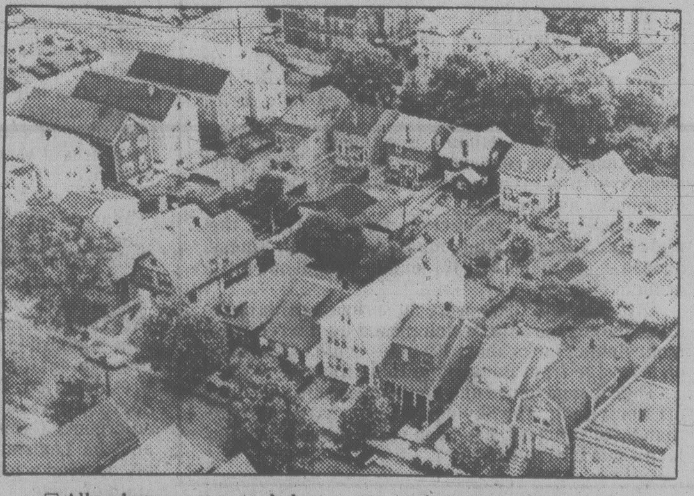
☐ Give Yukoners the right to choose provincial status.

☐ Deny foreign aid to countries engaging in military operations outside their borders.

☐ Provide new tax incentives in the mining industry to create 115,000 jobs in 20 years.

☐ Give small businesses a tax credit up to $5,000 for capital investment.

☐ Ensure an end to bank discrimination against women in granting credit.



☐ Allow homeowners to deduct mortgage interest and property taxes from their federal income tax, which will create 45,000 new housing starts and 100,000 jobs in its first year, Clark claims.

☐ Increase armed forces by 4,000 to a total of 83,000.

☐ Try to buy 78 F-14 fighter planes from Iran.

☐ Offer $15 million to the provinces for home care for elderly.

☐ Reduce the government's use of outside consultants by $250 million a year.

☐ Recognize Jerusalem as the capital of Israel and move Canada's embassy there from Tel Aviv.

☐ Aid dairy farmers by reducing the cheese import quota to 35 million pounds from 45 million pounds.

☐ Examine the establishment of a Public Interests Disputes Commission to help reduce the number of strikes.

☐ Immediately slash the federal sales tax on building materials.

☐ Index the capital gains tax and corporate inventory accounting for inflation.

☐ Require parliamentary approval for any new crown corporations or agencies.

☐ Improve immigration control measures at a cost of $1 million a year.

☐ Boost veterans' pensions by a total of $34.5 million a year.

☐ Give business a research and development tax credit, worth $125 million annually.

☐ Cut unemployment spending by $162 million.

This is your computer speaking

NIGEL HAWKES
London Observer

Voice processing machines could replace secretaries

The march of microelectronics into the office, and the implications it has for the many millions employed in clerical jobs, is already beginning to raise hackles.

So far the spotlight has fallen on word-processing, a technique whose name has a nasty flavor of Newspeak, or the Ministry of Truth, about it. The reality is more innocuous; it is simply a way of making typewriters more intelligent so that those who use them can be less intelligent — or, more likely, fewer in number.

Word-processing has yet to create the office revolution which its proponents keep telling us is around the corner. But there is another technology emerging which may have an even greater impact on the way we work. For simplicity it might be called voice processing, since it does for speech what word-processing does for text.

Machines now exist which can respond to the human voice, picking and choosing between one accent and another and responding only to a voice it knows, like a dog to its master. And machines also exist which can speak, using a small and simple vocabulary assembled electonically into short sentences.

Neither of these techniques is terribly new, or particularly clever. What is new is the realization that speech synthesis and recognition can be turned into useful products which could have an enormous impact in the office and factory.

And these products carry some conviction because behind them is the world's biggest corporation, Exxon, which for the past few years has been pouring money into systems which marry the computer to the human voice.

An oil company as big as Exxon is not going to put its money into a totally new area of business unless it is reasonably hopeful of a good return. Exxon Enterprises, the subsidiary set up by the company as a vehicle for the new investments, is adept at parrying questions about what it is up to, but there is no doubt that the investment made so far is very large indeed.

One of its most interesting products is a system designed to capture a major share in the $500 million a year telephone-answering business in the United States. Another is said to be a typewriter which responds to the human voice, dispensing with the need to hit the keys. Yet another is a system for direct input of data to a computer simply by talking to it, a system now being successfully marketed in Britain.

It is a massive effort by a huge corporation to diversify away from its traditional area of expertise. "If Exxon is not a major competitor to IBM in electronics products in five years' time, it is going to have squandered a lot of money," says Roger Camrass of Butler Cox, a leading computer consultancy.

How will the products work? Take the telephone-answering system as a good example of the sort of thing which can be done.

Every day, millions of people sit down at their desks, pick up the phone, dial a number, and don't get through.

This has nothing much to do with the telephone system itself. What really counts is whether the person called is sitting at his desk with his telephone resting gently in its cradle waiting to ring.

Otherwise — if your man is already on the phone, in a meeting, out to lunch, holidaying in Honolulu or simply not disposed to talk to you, the effort ends in frustration. Surveys in the United States suggest that of all the calls made, almost three-quarters fail to reach the party for whom they were intended.

Telephone answering devices can help, though they are chillingly impersonal and few people like using them. Delphi Communications Corporation, an Exxon affiliate, has come up with what it believes is a much better system.

Suppose the telephone rings in a small business; it might, for example, be a doctor's surgery, or a lawyer's office. If there is nobody there to answer it, the phone goes on ringing until, in the Delphi system, a computer decides to answer it and automatically routes it to a human operator.

In front of the operator is a screen, just like a TV screen. As he or she picks up the phone to answer the call, the computer displays on the screen the details of the subscriber for whom the call is intended.

This enables the operator to answer the call intelligently and take the message. But here the system gets really clever. Instead of noting down the message or typing it, it is automatically recorded on the computer memory as the operator talks to the caller.

When the person for whom the call was intended gets back to his office, he calls up the computer and instructs it to play him the message. Recognizing his voice, the computer searches through its memory for the right message and plays it back.

"Good morning", the system says. (There is no operator, this is the computer talking.) "You have four messages. Here is message number one. It came in at 11:15." It then plays back the conversation between the caller and the operator, before going on to the next message.

The subscriber can stop it at any time simply by saying "stop". He can ask it to skip any messages he doesn't want to hear, or begin again at the beginning on the command "begin". The subscriber can call in for his messages on any telephone, from anywhere, any time of the day or night.

The system is ideal for small businesses, who can dispense with secretaries. While it doesn't entirely solve the problem of getting through to the person you want, it does enable you to leave long, intelligent messages with a fair degree of certainty that they will get through. And it costs little more than a conventional phone-answering service.

The system also has the potential to be a kind of audio filing system, storing in a long-term memory all the conversations it captures. In theory, such a record could replace many written documents and a man's word — on the telephone, at least — would have to be his bond.

It could easily be extended to incorporate the idea of "voice-grams". All that would be necessary would be to phone the computer and dictate the message. The computer would then route it to its destination and the message would be "delivered" the next time the subscriber called in for his message.

Used within an office, a concept like this would enable people to communicate by leaving voice messages in each other's in-trays. Instead of work being constantly interrupted by phone calls, as happens now, it would be possible to store all the non-urgent calls and listen to them when it fitted in with the work pattern.

As well as responding to a human voice, the computer is also developing a voice of its own. Periphonics Inc. — another Exxon spin-off — is a company which has developed a computer which responds, in a reasonably life-like way, to a telephone caller.

The system might be used, for example, by a salesman. After a day out on the road he could phone his list of orders directly into the computer, guided through the order by the promptings of the computer itself.

To send orders the salesman uses a simple keyboard able to generate tones like a miniature electronic organ. It is attached to a normal telephone handset, the right buttons pressed, and the tones go down the wire to be interpeted by the computer as a series of numbers and letters.

If the salesman makes a mistake there is a good chance the computer will pick it up, and tell him to try again. The computer speaks perfectly comprehensible English, assembled from a "memory" of about 100-150 pre-recorded words and phrases. "Please hurry", it urges quietly if the salesman delays too long. At the end the computer will read the whole order back as a check.

The system does away with sending orders by post, having to turn them into computer-compatible form, and then feeding them into the machine.

Such systems as these are, admittedly, a small start, but in the view of Roger Camrass they could lead to a huge market in the mid-eighties. "And they could displace a massive amount of secretarial labor", he says. The point about voice processing is that it fits naturally and directly into existing offices without problems of reorganization.

Potential for the abuse of privacy growing with technology

By FRED REED
Washington Post

The threat of electronic intrusion into personal privacy is increasing, as one quickly learns in browsing through the technical press. There are threats great and small, direct and indirect, all of them innocent, but all tending toward subtle encroachment. A few examples, culled from a week's reading:

Europe is trying to standardize coding and technique to make possible an enormous international network of computers for exchange of commercial data — quite useful, but likely to make control of information difficult. The British police use a nationwide network of computers, which is said to keep records on political demonstrators, doubtless for genuine reasons of preventing destructive riots.

Data banks are not the only means of intrusion. Some American companies now use a telephone system that automatically keeps track of who made long-distance calls, to whom, for how long; the employee must dial a personal code to get the long-distance line. A bit more ominous was the European firm that recently tried to require its employees to wear special badges, detectible by sensors around the plant, which allowed a central computer to keep track of them. The work-force sensibly refused.

The potential for abuse grows because the technology improves. The electronics laboratories are in a state of exuberant fertility that is rare and perhaps unmatched in technological history. A variety of technologies from satellites to fibre optics is making possible the control of vast amounts of information. The major culprit is the microprocessor, the notorious "chip."

Microprocessors do little that conventional computers don't do, but they do it much cheaper, more reliably and in a small space. A computer that costs millions and occupies 30 cubic feet is too awkward to abuse. When it costs $300 and fits in a shirt pocket, abuse becomes cost-effective. The cost of computing power is falling precipitously, arguably to a point at which it will be like tap water, almost free.

Duncan Campbell of the New Statesman, having studied the British police computers, concluded that the "perspective which emerges is not of fast fact-finding systems to enhance police efficiency, but of determinedly crafted mechanisms for social control." The observation is typical of a school of thought that sees government as vaguely sinister. Campbell sees the danger but probably misunderstands the causes: England's totalitarian tendencies being among the world's most anemic, it is more likely that the police merely want the convenience of quickly getting information. The trouble is that the instruments of administrative convenience are identical to those of electronic oppression and, once employed for good purposes, can imperceptibly be turned to bad.

Libertarians make a tactical mistake in looking for official malice. There is none. None is needed. The normal instinct of government to meddle is quite enough. A government that concerns itself with specifications for toilet seats in factories will, given the means, concern itself with every detail of our lives. We may well find ourselves suffocating in a miasma of intrusive concern, requiring that the bureaucracy know everything about us.

In democratic countries, convenience is the inducement to electronic Big Brotherism, whether by government or by credit-card companies. Intrusion is so very convenient, not just to government and industry but — here's the catch — to those suffering the intrusion. Being able to cash a cheque quickly in a strange city is a blessing that is hard to refuse, even though it means having credit records in a data bank. For most people, the convenience of receiving a letter electronically in 10 minutes outweighs the probable ease with which it might be diverted to unintended recipients.

From the point of view of commerce, administrative convenience translates directly into competitiveness and impressive numbers of dollars. The practical advantages of data banks and, perhaps, of other forms of electonic surveillance, are so great as to be irresistible: Useful technology is almost always used. To prevent its misuse, we will need carefully drawn legislation, not futile attempts to prevent its adoption. Particularly, people will have to insist that, beyond a point, the right to privacy supercedes administrative convenience. It follows that we should acquire a resistance to the arguments in favor of intrusiveness.

Perhaps the commonest of these, offered at times by police, is that only the guilty have anything to fear. This is too silly to merit discussion. It warrants stationing a policeman in every living room, or rescinding the Bill of Rights. Another is the great fallacy that surrounds the use of computers: that doing something a thousand times more efficiently is not substantially different from doing it the old way. The idea has a specious plausibility. A police computer may contain only information in the public domain, such as court records or lists of unpaid traffic tickets. But when a New York policeman knows at once that an out-of-state speeder is wanted on a jay-walking ticket in Los Angeles, was convicted of homosexual solicitation in Cheyenne in 1961, and was arrested at a civil-rights march in Chicago in 1967, he knows more than is good for anybody.

Beyond the typewriter . . .

By ROBERT FULFORD
Toronto Star

Will computer revolutionize writing too?

Charles Dickens, according to one story, was the last major novelist who enjoyed the luxury of rewriting his novels after they were set up in galley proofs. He sent the first rough draft to the printer, where it was set in type. Then he went over the galleys at his leisure, inserting a few hundred words here or a few thousand words there, sometimes transforming the whole business. Then he might have it set in type again and go through the process once more.

The rising cost of typesetting ended that sort of thing a very long time ago. Authors and editors are now expected to send their manuscripts to the typesetters in precisely the way they want them to appear. If they change their minds later, it costs money. But the business of committing words to paper is still subject to endless variations, and at the moment it's about to go through its first major change since the appearance of the typewriter in the 19th century.

The typewriter transformed journalism, and later transformed literature. It was a piece of equipment, and like all equipment it dictated its own way of doing things. Long, flowing sentences and endless paragraphs no longer seemed appropriate to people sitting at typewriters. The typewriter seemed to cry out for efficient writing.

Short sentences. Short paragraphs. The typewriter seemed made for them: They looked so good on the page, so clean and neat and finished. Hemingway's style was a product of the typewriter age, and so was Orwell's. So is the style of almost everyone you read today in a newspaper or a magazine.

The typewriter also made writing more organized. It became possible to produce a second or third or fourth draft with the expenditure of much less energy than before; so rewriting became common. The meandering, repetitious essay began to disappear, because writers could see their writing more clearly as they wrote.

Sometimes journalism students are surprised or even annoyed when I advise them to become superb typists; they seem to think it's beneath them. But the fact is that the better you can type, the more willingly you will revise. Northrop Frye is said to attribute some of his success to the fact that as a young man he achieved championship-level typing skills. A typewriter is a writer's tool in the same way that a chisel is a stone sculptor's tool. There are no stone sculptors who boast that they can't handle a chisel but, curiously, there are still writers who think it vaguely meritorious that they're incompetent typists.

But as I write these words they're receding into the past, because typewriters are moving towards obsolescence. They're being replaced in newspaper offices by video display terminals (VDTs), hooked to computers. And in the home offices of some writers they're being replaced by word processors. In a decade or two, most of what you read will be written originally not with paper and ink but with electric signals.

The VDT is a television screen connected to a keyboard. What the writer types appears on the screen as a series of electric impulses in the shape of letters. The writer can correct the material endlessly while the computer holds it in the memory bank. When that process is finished, the material goes to an editor's screen to be judged and corrected.

So some Hemingway of the future, who may be learning his trade on the Toronto Star (as the original Hemingway did), will soon be working not with a typewriter but with a VDT. When he leaves to write stories he'll want to use the same technique. For that he'll acquire a word processor of his own.

Word processors — small-scale computers attached to screens and keyboards — cost more than $3,000 each, but they'll soon cost far less. The mystery writer John D. McDonald has one and wouldn't be without it. Alphonse Ouimet, the former CBC president, writes a good many government reports; he turns them out on the word processor in his house.

A literary critic was complaining to me one day about the difficulty of composing on a VDT at his newspaper. I suggested he write his column at home and and then transfer it to the VDT at the office. "I don't want to do that," he said. "I don't want to be a buggy whip manufacturer." So he soldiered on, and it worked out all right. A reporter on the Montreal Gazette, who has used VDTs for only a few months, told me he wouldn't ever go back to typing. "What the VDT turns out is so neat, so clean. I can't stand my own messy typing anymore."

If the typewriter transformed literature, what will the computer do? I detect, in the pages of some newspapers with VDTs, a sameness in the styles of various writers, but possibly that's only a transition phase, a certain early stiffness. My guess is that the effect will be on content rather than style. Computers will make information much more readily available to writers of all kinds, so that what would have been eight hours of library research will be performed in an hour at the computer terminal.

These changes are specially frightening for those of us who haven't even mastered the last stage in technology. I'm still unable to use an electric typewriter; I make do with a 1950 Underwood that a friend of mine calls "your old hand-banger." Can you jump from 1950 to 1960 without losing your bearings? Well, I've been talking about buying a word processor for months now. I might even do it.

today's markets

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market rose moderately in active mid-afternoon trading.

Advances outnumbered declines 192 to 149 with 208 issues unchanged.

Trading in TransCanada PipeLines Ltd. resumed at 12:10 p.m. after an opening halt for completion of an offer by Dome Petroleum Ltd. for 10.6 million shares at $23 a share.

A total of 23,863,443 shares were tendered under the offer at the Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver and Alberta markets.

Dome Petroleum has agreed to take 140,800 shares above its offer so the tendered shares can be purchased on a pro rata basis of 45 per cent.

TransCanada PipeLines fell ½ to $21⅜ by 2 p.m.

Today's exchange volume figure is inflated by the number of TransCanada Pipeline shares traded through the Toronto Stock Exchange.

Among other industrials, Bank of Montreal gained ½ at $23⅛, Brascan A ⅜ at $24, CP Ltd. ¼ at $30⅝, Imperial Oil A ¼ at $29⅜ and Inter-City Gas ⅛ at $12⅞.

Melcor Developments fell ¼ at $14, General Motors 1¼ at $67¾, Andres Wines ¾ at $14, Celanese Canada ¼ at $5¼ and Chrysler ⅜ at $10⅛.

Placer Development rose ⅛ at $28, Cypris Anvil ⅜ at $14¾ and Campbell Red Lake ¼ at $23. Camflo Mines fell ⅜ at $14⅛ and Brenda Mines ⅛ at $16⅝.

Coseka Resources rose ½ at $8¾, Canadian Homestead ¼ at $17 and Canadian Superior 2 at $122. Chieftain Development fell 2⅜ at $36½ and PanCanadian Pete ½ at $49½.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were little changed in a sluggish session on Wall Street.

When automakers posted an aggregate 25 per cent drop in sales for the 10-day period in mid-May, the auto issues and other blue chips sold off.

The auto group was generally lower again. Ford Motor lost ¾ to $41⅝, General Motors was down ½ to $58½, and American Motors dropped ⅛ to $6⅜, while Chrysler was unchanged at $8¾.

Schering-Plough led the active list, off ⅛ to $29⅝. A 222,700-share block traded at that price.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices moved slightly higher in light trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange today. Bank of Montreal advanced ¼ at $22⅞, Calgary Power A ⅜ at $45⅞, CP Ltd. ⅛ at $30⅝, Gulf Oil ¾ at $49¾, and Imperial Oil A ⅛ at $29¼. Alcan was down ⅜ at $41⅛.

London

LONDON (Reuter) — The London stock market fell moderately near the close of light trading today. The Financial Times index was down 4.0 to 518.4. Industrials were mixed while mines, oils and insurances declined. Canadian shares eased.

—VANCOUVER—

VANCOUVER (CP) — Prices were mixed in moderately active trading on the Vancouver Stock Exchange with a volume of 1,363,159 shares to 10:50 a.m. PDT.

In the industrials, Trans Canada Pipe was unchanged at $23 on 319,115 shares and Grouse Mountain was unchanged at .74 on 4,500. Kaiser Resources was unchanged at $19 5-8 on 3,500 and Daon Development was up 1-8 at $11 3-4 on 2,300. Hal Roach Studios was unchanged at $3.50 and Keg Restaurants was unchanged at $1.90.

Craigmont

Craigmont Mines Ltd. reported net earnings for the six months ended April 30 were $6.7 million or $1.32 a share, compared with $1.2 million or 24 cents a share in the same period last year.

Craigmont said in a news release that revenue was $25.8 million, compared with $10 million in the previous year.

R. G. Duthie, company president, said the improved earnings were due to a higher copper price and an increased premium on U.S. currency, coupled with a 39-per-cent increase in sales.

Craigmont said the grade of ore milled at its mine in Merritt, B.C. in the southern Interior continues to decline and it's estimated the mine will close by the fall of 1980.

N.Telecom

Northern Telecom reported consolidated first quarter earnings for the period ended March 31, 1979, of $24,995,000, or 84 cents a share, up 30 per cent from $19,221,000, or 73 cents a share, for the same period in 1978.

Consolidated sales for the first quarter of 1979 totaled $421,690,000, compared with $295,396,000 for the same period in 1978.

The company noted that three subsidiaries acquired last year added $83.5 million to the sales total. They were Sycor Inc., Data 100 Corp., and Spectron Corp.

McLaughlin

Real estate developer S. B. McLaughlin Associates Ltd. reported substantially improved first-quarter earnings of $6,002,000 or $1.95 a share compared with a loss of $1,008,000 or 44 cents a share for the same period last year.

The company said the improvement is because of sale of its property in a Grouse Mountain, B.C., ski resort and a Port Credit, Ont., marina.

Power Corp.

Power Corp. of Canada Ltd. recorded consolidated net earnings for the first quarter of 1979 of $12,358,000, or 95 cents a share, compared with $2,127,000, or 13 cents a share, for the same period of 1978, the company said Friday.

Gross revenue amounted to $33,928,000 for the first quarter of 1979, compared with $33,873,000 for the same period last year, while losses totalled $1,480,000, compared with $563,000 in 1978.

Bruce demanding stall on transfer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Convicted murderer Andy Bruce has asked the Federal Court of Canada to stop his impending transfer from British Columbia Penitentiary.

Bruce said he has been told he will be transferred to a penal institution in eastern Canada once air travel arrangements have been finalized, adding he expects to be taken to Millhaven Penitentiary near Kingston, Ont.

Lawyer John Conroy said his client's appeal will be heard Monday.

Bruce said in documents to the court that several top penitentiary officials told him of the move when they visited his solitary confinement cell.

He said he wants the transfer delayed at least until his marriage appeal can be heard.

Bruce said an appeal of the earlier court decision will be rendered academic unless he is allowed to stay in B.C.

Cheers for 'left-handed governor'

KEMANO (CP) — They might not remember what he said about the Queen's role in Canadian politics, but the kids of Kemano won't soon forget the half-day holiday that B.C. Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving promised when he visited Wednesday.

Bell-Irving flew here by helicopter and told the honor guard of cub scouts and brownies that he would use his vice-regal powers to give them and their schoolmates Friday afternoon off.

The half-day holiday is an effective bit of sugar that the lieutenant-governor has used to make his civics lessons go down more easily during the first two days of his 10-day tour of the northwest corner of the province.

His decision to close two schools in Hazelton on Tuesday afternoon drew a standing ovation from 350 high school students there.

And an announcement that all six schools in Kitimat would close Friday afternoon caused one seven-year-old there to remark that he would never forget the visit of "the left-handed governor."

The kids of Kemano, however, hardly needed a special holiday to mark Bell-Irving's visit — dignitaries rarely reach this isolated coastal community.

Tucked against the mountains at the end of one of the countless fjords that describe the province's coast, Kemano has only one reason for its existence. It is the site of the power station that fuels the Alcan Aluminium smelter at Kitimat, 25 minutes away by helicopter or 3 1-2 hours by boat.

About 250 people live in the Alcan-owned town where the only constant link with Kitimat is the powerlines that run over the mountains and along the Kildala River valley to the smelter, about 40 kilometres away.

The power station, with turbines turned by water that flows through tunnels cut into the rocks from mountain lakes 15 kilometres away, was built in conjunction with the smelter which began operations 25 years ago.

A 40-passenger boat brings in milk and takes out passengers once a week and a barge brings food and mail twice a week.

The community is the kind of isolated spot to which Bell-Irving is taking his campaign to make the role of the monarchy and his role as its representative more widely known.

Travelling with his wife, the 66-year-old lieutenant-governor, in office just over a year, is no stranger to the area.

As a university student, he spent several summers working for his father's fish-packing company at canneries along the nearby Skeena and Nass river valleys.

During this tour, he has started his school lectures with a brief explanation of his function, then opened the proceedings to question and answer sessions.

The questions ranged from serious — he was asked in Kitimat what would happen to the Quebec lieutenant-governor if that province separated — to enquiries about how much he makes ("Barely enough to pay the bills.") and what he does in his spare time. (Usually go to bed.")

His reputation for holiday giving has gone before him as students in Hazelton asked if it was true that they would get the afternoon off. Walking out of the assembly hall after confirming the rumor, Bell-Irving said with a smile: "That's what they came to hear."

Sea-Bus two years old

VANCOUVER (CP) — The bright orange babies of the city's transit system will be two years old next month and they've made a big splash with commuters.

The infants are catamaran passenger ferries called Sea-Bus, which began service June 17, 1977, and their design has attracted worldwide attention in the transit industry.

The 400-passenger ferries, operated by British Columbia Hydro, have proven popular with commuters, carrying an estimated 6.4 million persons 3.5 kilometres across Burrard Inlet between residential North Vancouver and the downtown business district.

The ferry system was established in 1974 by the former New Democratic Party government to ease traffic on buses and two major bridges. In more than 70,000 crossings the two ferries have never missed a scheduled trip for mechanical reasons.

The 35-metre-long vessels — Burrard Beaver and Burrard Otter — offer a 15-minute service across the harbor Monday through Saturday, with half-hour frequencies evenings, Sundays and holidays.

The double-end design allows them to travel with speed and manoeuvrability in either direction, avoiding costly turn-around time and risk of accident. Each vessel has a crew of four — master, mate and two attendants.

Hydro says two elements of the Sea-Bus system — closed-circuit television security and an automatic, self-service fare box — are the first of their kind in Canada.

The fare box issues a piece of paper similar to a bus transfer, but with the amount paid inscribed on the back. This provides passengers with a journey and a free connecting ride on a land bus. If a passenger boards a land bus first, the regular transfer can be used as a ticket on the Sea-Bus.

The design of the vessels and terminals follows rail transit principles, allowing passengers to board and alight quickly. Hydro says up to 400 passesngers can leave and another 400 embark within 90 seconds.

Each Sea-bus has six sets of power-operated double doors for simultaneous unloading on one side and loading on the other.

Each ferry has four diesel engines. If trouble develops with one engine, it can be taken out for maintenance while the ferry continues to operate.

The terminals are floating modules of pre-stressed reinforced concrete, supporting modern metal buildings which are fully automated. If the terminals did not float, Hydro says, the difference in water levels at high and low tides would create considerable problems.

Also adjacent to the North Vancouver terminal is a bus loop into which all connecting North Shore buses travel to meet passengers heading to or from the Sea-Bus. On the Vancouver side, buses pull up in front of the CP Rail terminal, which is connected by covered walkway with the waterfront station.

Hydo says that, by using the CP Rail station, the system could be connected with future commuter trains.

Volunteer-only for pest spray

VANCOUVER (CP) — A voluntary pesticide spray program by the federal agriculture ministry will begin today in some areas of the city's Kitsilano residential district in attempts to stop the infestation of the destructive gypsy moth.

Spraying of the pesticide carbaryl by ministry officials will be limited to properties of residents who voluntarily approved the program and to city-owned boulevards.

The Greenpeace environmental group has criticized the use of carbaryl and has offered an organic insecticide soap as an alternative to the spraying.

But the soap is considered to be less effective against the moth which is capable of destroying massive amounts of foliage if left unchecked.

Meanwhile, representatives of Okanagan fruit growers complained to city council Wednesday that the voluntary program is not sufficient to stop the insect.

A spokesman for the British Columbia Fruit Growers' Association criticized council for succumbing to pressure from environmentalists and blocking a comprehensive mandatory carbaryl spray program.

The spokesman said new export markets could refuse to buy B.C. fruit if the Okanagan Valley becomes infested with gypsy moth.

B.C. standings still up in air

The final outcome of the May 10 B.C. provincial election won't be known for two more days when the final count in the widespread Atlin riding is made.

Frank Calder, the incumbent Nishga Indian Socred trailed his NDP challenger by only nine votes on election night.

The count was too close to give the victory to Al Passarell, so both candidates have been nervously awaiting the final count.

That count can be undertaken today or Friday at the discretion of the Atlin returning officer.

A spokesman in his office said from Stewart today that he opted for the latest possible date to ensure all absentee ballots have made it through the mail.

Socred lawyers from Vancouver and NDP lawyers from Prince Rupert will fly into Stewart Friday to oversee the final count.

If Passarell holds onto his slim victory, it will give the NDP 26 seats to the Socreds 31. A Calder win, however, would swing the finally tally by two — 32 Socreds to 25 NDP.

That difference is considered to be a significant factor in how the new house will operate once the session begins early next month.

Premier Bennett has to appoint a neutral Speaker and deputy Speaker. A five-seat majority doesn't give him nearly as much room to manouevre as seven seats and both parties will be watching the Atlin outcome closely.

Senior views rejected

VANCOUVER (UPC) — The British Columbia Housing Management Commission ruled Wednesday that residents in one of its senior citizens' highrises will not have a voice in the selection of smoke detectors for their building despite their concern about radiation emitted by the devices.

BCHMC chairman Mary Kerr rejected a photo-electric cell type of detector suggested by New Democrat MLA Gary Lauk after many old people living in the apartment building expressed fears about the radiation produced by the detectors being installed.

Kerr said the residents were being upset about nothing and arranged a demonstration by health ministry physicist Wayne Green to show that the detectors emitted less radiation than a luminous watch.

She said the detectors have proved to be harmless and that the installation program will proceed on schedule. The alternative for anyone concerned about radiation danger is simple. "They can move out, " she said.

Nelson trap ban

NELSON (CP) — City council has passed a bylaw which bans use of leghold traps after incidents last year in which pet cats were caught in the devices. The traps had been used by local residents to catch skunks which had been invading chicken houses. The city is the fourth in B. C. to ban use of the traps, says the Association for the Protection of Fur-Bearing Animals.

Mountie Fined

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — An RCMP officer was convicted of common assault Wednesday and fined $300 in provincial court. Charges were laid against 29-year-old Const. Ross Davidson after the officer struck a 16-year-old youth last Dec. 8 following a snowmobile chase through the streets of Fort St. James about 120 kilometres northwest of here. In passing sentence, Judge C. J. Woodliffe said he was unable to find any evidence favoring Davidson in the case. Witnesses said the officer had hit the youth on the ear with a flashlight and used foul language.

Promoters Guilty

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two Vancouver stock promoters were convicted in county court Wednesday of receiving more than $100,000 in kickbacks through various stock deals. Judge Lee Skipp found Gino Cicci and Joseph Romano, both 45, quilty of conspiracy to commit fraud. The charges stemmed from stock deals in 1972 and 1973 involving Seneca Developments Ltd. No date was set for sentencing.

Subs included

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that substitute school teachers should be included in master contract negotiations with school boards in the province. In making the ruling, Mr. Justice H. P. Legg ordered an arbitration board to review a pay dispute between the Greater Victoria Teachers' Association and the Victoria school board. The arbitration board was involved in a test case affecting 55 part-time teachers in B.C. The board had decided it did not have the power to settle 1979 pay rates for substitutes because not all of them were required to have teaching certificates. The board said it made the ruling because of a provincial cabinet order last year concerning the definition of teachers.

HORRID BUT HARMLESS is explosion of algae in Goodacre Lakes in Beacon Hill Park. Slimy stuff does no harm to the swans and waterfowls but parks men plan to use a solution of copper sulphate to get rid of the aquatic plants if they continue to spread on the surface of the water. Algae occurs every year in the lakes during warm weather spells and looks unsightly if allowed to get out of hand.

Vancouver beauty queen dies

NEW WESTMINSTER (UPC) - The reigning Miss Vancouver, Patricia Morley, 20, died Wednesday in hospital from head and internal injuries suffered in a car crash last weekend.

A hospital spokesman said the girl remained in critical condition from the time she was rushed to the hospital until her death.

RCMP said Miss Morley was a passenger in a car driven by her boyfriend, Gary Conratow of Vancouver, when the car was struck by a truck a few minutes past midnight Saturday.

She was returning from filling an official engagement as the city's representative at the Cloverdale Rodeo Queen contest at Cloverdale in the Fraser Valley.

Conratow was treated for minor facial cuts and the driver of the truck, Digby Metzger of Cloverdale, was treated for minor head injuries.

Police said an investigation of the girl's death is continuing. There will be an inquest. No date has been set.

Highlands bylaw goes nowhere at hearing

Capital Regional District planners have yet to come up with a proposal acceptable to both sides in the Highlands rezoning debate.

That much became clear as the district held another public hearing in Colwood Wednesday night.

Only about 70 people turned up for the meeting, compared with a noisy crowd of 300 that attended a similar hearing last January.

But although the audience was smaller and quieter, and a new proposal was under debate, differences over what should be done with the Highlands ran deep.

Many of the arguments presented in January were repeated. At that time the CRD was proposing to lift the present 45-acre freeze in the Highlands and replace it with a 10-acre minimum lot size over most of the area.

In January over 150 people had taken the microphone to argue the issue, with those opposed outnumbering those in favor by about four to one.

Only two people spoke in support of the CRD's new proposal which would see four bylaws imposed on the rugged area. There were numerous objectors.

The proposal is to have four bylaws allowing small lot sizes in the Langford and Willis Point fire protection areas, a 10-acre minimum over some 11,500 acres in the Highlands and retention of the current 45-acre minimum zoning requirment in the rest of the area.

Wednesday's meeting was to discuss the bylaw that would impose a 10-acre minimum over much of the area.

Speakers stressed the unique wilderness-like atmosphere in the Highlands and urged the regional district to ensure that the area is not spoiled.

Those in favor of the new zoning proposal noted that the current freeze has placed some land owners in a financial squeeze because they can't sell their land and are experiencing difficulties paying taxes.

Opponents stressed the need for detailed plans before any changes are made to zoning.

Bob McMinn, a key figure in the ranks of those opposed to rezoning, said Greater Victoria would be enriched by preserving park land and forested zones in the Highlands area.

He said 10-acre subdivisions would see the area chopped up by roads, spoiling the region's tranquility.

McMinn suggested tax rebates to encourage landowners to keep their land in its present state.

He also argued for establishment of a Highlands Trust, made up of residents and landowners, to oversee the area's future.

Broadmead group wins round

A rezoning application for the proposed Broadmead Village shopping centre will be considered in open session by Saanich council's planning committee before it is forwarded to the Advisory Planning Commission for study.

Council agreed to the rerouting this week, under pressure from the Broadmead Ratepayers' Association.

The group had argued that the normal procedure of referring the application to a closed-door meeting of the APC and afterwards calling a public hearing was inappropriate for what would eventually be the largest shopping centre on Vancouver Island.

The group wants the relevant reports and written staff evaluations on all aspects of the development to be made available to the public at least a month before a date is set for the public hearing.

Among the reports requested is a staff assessment of projected shopping centre needs in Saanich over the next 20 years.

Residents win Monterey fight

An Oak Bay council committee Wednesday decided not to widen Monterey Avenuen between Brighton and McNeil.

The decision followed protests from residents who claim widening the street will increase traffic and encourage speeding.

The committee agreed to retain the 26-foot width but felt those residents without garages or desiring parking bays should be allowed them at this time at no cost.

It also warned residents that council could not guarantee the availability of street parking.

In other business, the committee received letters from John Haley, of 198 Demson, and Colin McCullough, of 194 Denison, opposing for esthetic and security reasons the opening of the path on the right-of-way which separates their properties.

William Stavdal, of 2106 Marne, who was instrumental in opening two other public pathways to Walbran Park told the committee he was seeking legal advice on ensuring the opening of the right-of-way.

Six years ago council forced the opening of a right-of-way on Heron between Burdick and Dorset.

Hillside hosting Home Ec display

Home economics teachers and students in Greater Victoria School District today and Friday are holding an exhibition of made-in-school clothes in Hillside Shopping Centre.

The event, which includes two fashion shows, will feature displays of student work on both days. The fashion shows will be staged Friday at 4 p.m. and 7 p.m.

About 47 teachers and students from 15 junior and senior secondary schools are involved in the project.

Displays will include foods and nutrition, clothing and textiles, housing and interior design and family studies.

Can We Make Our Roads Safer?

PUBLIC MEETING OF THE
MOTOR VEHICLE TASK FORCE

WHO: All groups and individuals interested in the laws and procedures governing the use of motor vehicles in British Columbia are invited to a public meeting with the provincial government's MOTOR VEHICLE TASK FORCE.

WHAT: The purpose of the meeting is to give British Columbians, in all areas of the province, the opportunity to express their opinions directly to the task force and ask questions of the members.

WHEN: THURSDAY, MAY 24th, 1979, at 7:30 p.m.

WHERE: INGRAHAM HOTEL, 2915 DOUGLAS STREET, VICTORIA

WHY: After completing the first part of its study and releasing an interim report (copies of which will be available at the public meeting) the task force is now launching the second part of its study into vehicle and highway safety, law enforcement and administrative procedures. Through public meetings, it hopes to obtain a variety of ideas and opinions to assist in this task.

MORE HI-FI

Here at Young's we have always maintained that the most important part of any stereo system — regardless of price — is the speakers. We are pleased to announce that in addition to the fine lineup of British high-fidelity loudspeakers we now carry, we have added the range of PHILIPS loudspeaker systems.
Pictured here is the PHILIPS SP39 loudspeaker system — typical of the PHILIPS line up. This system features such items as a high quality dome midrange and dome tweeter which give incredible clarity and definition along with wide dispersion. The bass driver has a fundamental resonance frequency of 20 Hz and avoids the hollow, boxy tones so often found in speakers of this size.
All in all this is a fine system capable of pleasing the most discerning of listeners. Additionally, this speaker is a fine piece of furniture. Come in and listen to the PHILIPS range — a fine choice — a sound choice — at Young's.

Deaths blamed on drink

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said today his ministry is still looking for ways to cut down on alcohol-related highway deaths.

Commenting on the 14 fatalities over the Vuctoria Day holiday weekend, Gardom said most of them were probably alcohol-related. "They almost always are," he said.

That is one reason his ministry stepped up its anti-drinking-driving programs such as the BATmobiles and roadside checks, which have had some success, he said.

But stiffer penalties may be another answer.

Asked if that could mean jail for first offenders, Gardom said that is one of the options that could be looked at.

The minister said he has never been convinced fines are the best deterrent.

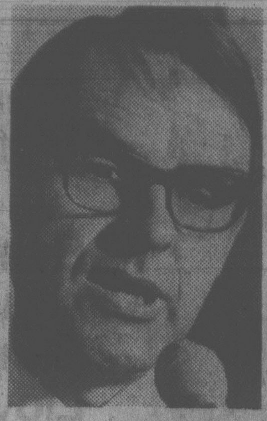
He noted the provincial government task force on motor vehicles is currently travelling the province seeking public input on the laws governing the operation of motor vehicles.

He said he hopes anyone from the public with views on the topic would attend the hearings.

The task force's earlier interim report recommended automatic jail sentences for drivers caught driving while under suspension.

Gardom earlier welcomed the findings of that interim report.

Wash. N-plant no worry: McGeer



McGEER
... Candu advocated

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Science and Technology Minister Pat McGeer says he is not concerned about a proposed nuclear power plant near Bellingham, Wash.

In an interview Wednesday the minister said he would like to see Washington State authorities purchase a Canadian Candu reactor for the project because of the superior technology in the Canadian model.

The project would be constructed in Sedro Wooley, just east of Anacortes across the straits from Victoria.

It needs only final licensing approval from U.S. authorities before it goes ahead.

That licence, however, is currently being held up by the three-month moratorium placed on all new nuclear installations by the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission, following the nuclear accident at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania.

McGeer strongly indicated the Social Credit government's opposition to nuclear energy for the province is based on the fact it is not needed, rather than on any potential hazard.

He said B.C. does not intend to make any submissions opposing the Washington plant.

If the Sedro Wooley project goes ahead, the U.S. would be wise to choose the Canadian Candu reactor, McGeer said.

"It is the most superior of the nuclear power plants that are available. The Americans obviously made a poor choice in their technology. It's inferior to ours," he said.

"And they are paying the price in the concern that their citizens have over the reliability and safety of the plants."

The minister blamed the press for a lot of the emotion and fear surrounding nuclear energy.

If the media would emphasize the positive aspects of the Candu reactor, it would allay a lot of the suspicions about nuclear power, McGeer said.

In the past McGeer has called the Candu the Cadillac of reactors. Wednesday he added that Canada should be doing a better job selling its reactors to the rest of the world.

McGeer said B.C. is lucky in that it won't need nuclear power.

But there is world-wide shortage of power sources and the best short-term energy is improved nuclear technology, he said.

He said it's unfortunate the U.S. has always resisted Canadian technology and added if the U.S. had adopted the Candu technology years ago, they would be a lot better off today.

Specialists' supply short

Greater Victoria School District is having trouble finding qualified teacher specialists to fill learning assistance positions.

"There are a number of positions open, but we're not attracting the people, which may limit us," assistant superintendent Court Brousson told a board planning committee meeting Wednesday.

Administration can't find a qualified psychometrician to head a three member learning assistance team that will travel around the senior high schools in the district.

Creation of the team is one of the recommendations of the adolescent options committee formed a year ago to study secondary school learning conditions.

Brousson said none of the three team members has been hired yet and the district start advertising outside the district and B.C. Saskatchewan has an excellent training centre for psychometricians, he said.

A co-ordinator has been hired for the new career assessment centre and six or seven candidates are being screened to for a the position of counselling co-ordinator for the district's alternative programs.

Sealey in race

Norma Sealey has has resigned from the Saanich school board to enter the June 30 Sidney mayoralty contest.

She will be opposed by James Lang, who has resigned as a Sidney alderman.

Sealey served on council before being elected to the school board.

She was also the first woman to serve as president of the B.C. Recreation Association and is presently B.C. director of the Canadian Parks and Recreation Association.

Mayor Dick Leigh recently retired because of ill health.

Dropout counselling eyed

Greater Victoria school board will be asked to extend the district's obligation to students into the homes of dropouts.

The administration wants to set up a dropout counselling service in August, assistant superintendent Court Brousson told a board planning committee meeting Wednesday.

Brousson said board permission is needed because the move means a major change of policy.

Traditionally a school's responsibility ends when a student drops out.

But the administration would like to keep track of students who leave school early and offer to help them return to the system.

Brousson said schools have a responsibility to discuss the future with the parents of dropouts. In many cases former students want to return to the system but don't know how to go about it.

Schools superintendent Allan Stables said the board has no control over the activities of dropouts over 16 years of age and must decide how far its moral obligations extend.

Dash 7 due

Trial runs of a short takeoff and landing craft will be made Wednesday as part of a transportation seminar sponsored by Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

The de Havilland Dash 7 will land at Work Point, the area listed as a potential airport if the STOL service goes into operation.

Drug haul just tip of iceberg?

facilitate the importation of marijuana.

It is not known whether Canadian authorities will try to seek extradition to face charges here, but Waltz indicated this is a possibility.

Waltz said most of the marijuana taken off the 51-metre freighter Samarkanda at the head of Sydney Inlet was apparently destined for American market.

Said Staples: "We believe they (the smugglers) were planning on using it as a mother cache, coming up in small boats and bleeding off the supply as needed."

On Wednesday the Canadian Armed Forces destroyer Qu'Appelle escorted the Samarkanda and the 16½-metre Whitecap, also seized in the raid, into Esquimalt Harbor.

The convoy arrived at about 2 p.m. and the Samarkanda, a converted submarine net layer built in 1945, and the Whitecap, a cabin cruise registered to an unidentified Seattle person, were placed under heavy armed guard at the military dock.

RCMP and Canadian servicemen had reloaded the Samarkanda with the hundreds of bales of marijuana that were found cached in the bush at the head of the inlet.

Although an exact count of the bales has not yet been made, police believe there are about 700, each weighing about 100 pounds. That amount would have a wholesale value of between $50 to $70 million.

Staples said police moved into the inlet early last Saturday. He said he took a position on top of a mountain where he acted as lookout and coordinated the movement of about 50 other officers camped out along the shores and in fishing boats in the area.

Sgt. Bob Hawkes of the RCMP drug squad in Victoria, one of those who took part said he watched the two suspect vessels enter the inlet late Monday.

When it became apparent the drop-off was imminent the Qu'Appelle was dispatched out of Esquimalt to blockade the inlet and prevent the Samarkanda from escaping. It arrived at about 4 a.m.

As day broke police saw the Samarkanda had run aground and was tilting well over on its side. They swiftly made their move.

Two suspects were arrested on the vessel, the other 18 were rounded up on the shore.

Four more were thought to have escaped into the dense forest. A search was mounted but police now believe they were fed false information and that there were only 20 involved in the operation, not 24.

The suspects were flown to Victoria aboard RCMP planes in relays Wednesday morning and appeared in provincial court later in the afternoon charged with importing marijuana, possession of marijuana for the purposes of trafficking and conspiring to import an illicit drug.

They included: Severo Guerrero, 45, Michael Walter Butler, 27, Stephen Earl Johnson, 33, George Woodrow Christopher, 30, Hernando Hernadez, 37, Jaime Mortini Marin, 37, Rudolph Feyton Hodson, 43, Johnny Calzada, 22. Pedro Nel Velez, 31, Holmes Gomez, 27, William Terry Hines, 38, Uriel Tabonda, 26, Jaime Gutierrez, 29, Segundo Quinomes, 33, Ariel Moncada, 25, Edar Barragan, 19, Abrahn Angulo, 36, Hugo Ortis, 33, Marco Antonio Penago, 59, and Evert Forbes, 60.

Police believe Hines, Butler, and Johnson are American citizens. Immigration authorities are now attempting to determine the nationalities of the others. There is a suggestion some are from Costa Rica and others from Colombia. A small plastic bag which police found in a cabin in the Samarkanda bore the name of a store in Tumaco, a small Colombian port on the Pacific Ocean.

Judge William Ostler remained the suspects in custody to Monday morning to give them an opportunity to speak with legal counsel. Pleas and election of trial method will likely be made later in the week.

The case is complicated by the fact the majority of the suspects speak Spanish only.

Meanwhile RCMP here are awaiting instructions from Ottawa on the disposal of the seized marijuana. It is expected the bulk, except for random samples necessary for court purposes, will be destroyed. The marijuana seized last July was subsequently burned in the municipal incinerator in North Cowichan.

Staples said the Samarkanda and Whitecap have been seized by the RCMP for drug importation.

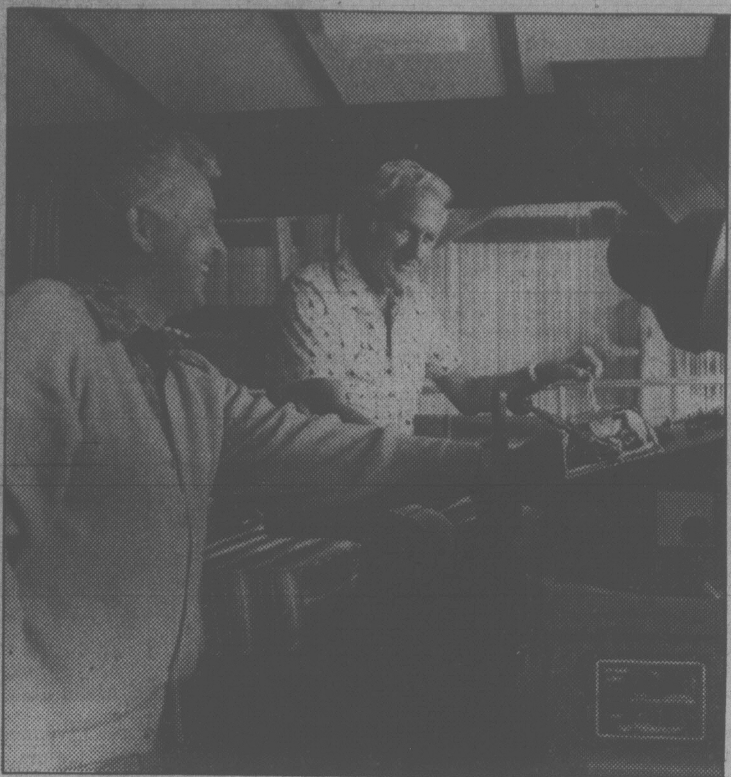
The $250,000 Cove Lady marks major milestone for Canoe Cove Manufacturing



Trev Deeley discusses controls with Don Matheson

She's no. 500 and plenty more are coming

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Trev Deeley has finally found his dream boat, a 48-foot fibreglass yacht with two staterooms, a luxury recreation area and all the comforts of a good home.

The Cove Lady, which will be formally launched Saturday, is the 500th boat to come off the ways of Canoe Cove Manufacturing Co., a Sidney-area firm that gets bigger every year.

Toasting the occasion with Deeley will be Don Matheson, an owner of the Canoe Cove firm, who is proud that his company has survived for 21 years — and has grown with the times.

Deeley has purchased six boats in the last 10 years looking for the ideal vessel and he has finally found it at Canoe Cove.

"We think we've really got something now," Matheson said. "We have made comparisons with other builders and we don't think there is a better boat anywhere."

A similar Canoe Cove boat recently was in a pleasure craft show at Newport Beach, California, and drew raves, Matheson said.

"We sold the display boat and another one just like it."

Matheson is looking forward to Saturday's ceremony.

"We've come a long way in 21 years. We started here in 1958 and anyone who simply survives in this business is doing well."

For example, of 146 companies that advertised in a yachting magazine in 1976, 53 have since gone out of business.

"The mortality rate is very high."

But despite higher costs than their American counterparts, Canoe Cove has gone from strength to strength. Sales in the first year, 1958, totalled about $100,000.

This year's sales will nudge $3 million.

Number of boats produced each year varies from about 12 to 40, depending on size.

The plant, located immediately to the east of Swartz Bay, employs 42 plus about half a dozen office employees. This is close to the optimum capacity of 50 plus office staff.

While orders have come in from Colombia, Tahiti and Hawaii, the bulk are from Canadians.

However, Canoe Cove has recently made significant inroads into the American market where about 25 per cent of the orders now originate.

The decline in the Canadian dollar has helped to counteract the higher Canadian costs. For example, the average wage at Canoe Cove is $8 and hour, compared with $6 in the U.S. Materials are about 10 per cent higher here, due in part to import duties. While motors come in duty-free, some materials have duties as high as 17.5 per cent.

While its main sales are to individuals, Canoe Cove has made 56 vessels for the federal government, including 10 RCMP patrol ships.

The company is also working on a boat for B.C. Ferries Corp., the 38-passenger Dogwood Princess II, which will run between Langdale and Gambier Island. Powered by twin GM diesels the ferry costs about $150,000. She will cruise at 13 knots.

The gas shortage is not a significant problem for the industry.

"Pleasure boats are used only a few days a year. Many boats moored nearby are used less than 100 hours in a year. That doesn't consume much fuel."

Fuel is a tiny fraction of the expense of pleasure boats, unlike automobiles.

When moving, however, the vessels consume diesel at a rapid rate. It is the equivalent of getting about one-and-a-half miles to the gallon.

The main problem facing Canoe Cove Manufacturing is the expiry of the company's lease in 1984.

"The landowner (J.A. Ellis, who owns the nearby Canoe Cove Marina) wants to put in a condominum development here when we move out. The North Saanich council seems to be supporting him in his plan.

"We think we will be able to find a location nearby — at least we hope so. We don't want to have to move to Vancouver. This has been a good industry for North Saanich."

Matheson already has his eye on one or two potential sites but there is always the question of getting a good price.

And then there will be the hassle and expense of the move.

But in the meantime there is the Saturday '500' celebration.

Trev Deeley is delighted his boat is No. 500 for the Canoe Cove firm.

The son of Vancouver car dealer Fred Deeley, he believes he has found the perfect vessel.

"I've been looking for a cruiser with a flush deck. Canoe Cove came up with the ideal design two years ago."

"But the one I bought then (boat number five) was 53 feet, and a little difficult for my wife and I to dock. This 48-foot one will be exactly right."

Price tag will be $212,000, plus accessories, which will bring the price to a quarter of a million.

"I've been looking for a boat like this all my life and it was a case of sixth time lucky," he said.

Although born into a car family, Deeley, 59, was always more interested in boats and motorcycles. He became a dealer for Honda and later Yamaha and now is a distributor for Harley-Davidson.

He is semi-retired, and able to spend winters in Palm Springs and summers cruising B.C. waters, but he motorcyled across Canada twice in recent years — in 1976 and again in 1978, visiting clients along the way. The 7,500-mile trip from the Atlantic to Pacific was fun in '76 — not a drop of rain — but it drizzled almost every day in '78.

Deeley also owns a small plane. But boating is the greatest fun, he says.

"There is a picture of me playing in a rowboat when I was two. I always loved being on the water."

Meeting called on team policing

The Victoria police board will hold a special meeting June 7 to discuss team policing.

The proposal would see the establishment of small teams of policemen responsible for general duty policing in selected areas of the community.

Board member Alf Hood proposed the meeting Wednesday after the board received a letter from Ald. Robin Blencoe urging action on a proposal to try team policing.

Hood said it is time the board reviewed all the material available and have a full discussion of the concept.

"We've been nibbling at this thing from meeting to meeting," he complained.

Board member Janet Baird agreed, saying that "Ald. Blencoe is quite right, we haven't done anything on this."

Baird also criticized colleague Phil Fawcett who produced a report on team policing at the meeting.

Baird said the report was superficial and had come out of the blue.

"I got a report last night that was supposed to be a committee effort," she said. "I was really angry . . . when I saw this report of yours."

Last year Fawcett and Baird were assigned to look into the team policing concept with a view to providing the board with recommendations.

But Baird said there has been no communication between herself and Fawcett.

"If we were all going to do our own little junket why didn't you tell me? I could have had my report done three months ago."

Baird said she'd tried to contact Fawcett but had always found him busy with something else.

Fawcett apologized for not working with Baird, saying he'd been involved in a number of other projects.

He said he'd recently rushed the report together.

"It has been, I agree, something that's been done in a very great hurry, but I thought that the mayor (Mike Young) wanted something in his hands for this meeting."

Fawcett said his recommendations were just personal ones that were meant to be topics for discussion, nothing more.

His report recommends that policemen be encouraged to become more involved in the community but that the idea of community police offices not be proceeded with. The report did not deal with more general questions of reorganizing the police force into a team model.

New campaign to cut break-ins

A new program aimed at cutting down on thefts and break-ins will be launched this summer by the Victoria police department.

Chief Jack Gregory told the police board Wednesday a door-to-door canvass of homes will be held June 4 to Aug. 31 as part of Operation Identification.

"The objective of the project is to reduce the break and entry rate and increase the recovery rate of stolen property," said Gregory.

He said 13 school students will be hired for the project.

The students will knock on as many doors as they can during the three months. They will aid residents in inscribing residential and business property with an underlying mark that helps in the recovery of stolen property.

Gregory said the program will greatly help in making people more aware of home security.

The program is funded by the department of the solicitor-general.

. . . trustees say no

Greater Victoria school board's education commission chairman Bernard Gillie said today the commission will try to get along without a budget increase and remuneration for members.

"I simply asked the board to give it some consideration, that's all," Gillie said.

He was commenting on a board planning committee decision Wednesday to cut his budget submission from $43,900 to the original $33,850 set aside when the commission was formed.

The committee also rejected Gillie's suggestion each commission member be given an honorarium.

Gillie, who receives $2,000 a month, is the only commission member drawing a salary.

Trustee Mark Fisher said Wednesday Gillie knew the budget was fixed and that members worked on a voluntary basis when he accepted the position several months ago.

"It's time they got on with the job, October will be soon upon us," Fisher said.

The commisssion has access to all district files and is supposed to complete its study by Oct. 15. However, Gillie says the project will take at least 18 months and only an interim report will be ready by October.

The planning committee is recommending to the board the commission not be given the extra $10,200 it wants to hire outside researchers to conduct program evaluations.

The board told Gillie research is to be conducted by the district administration, but he says the administration doesn't have the time or resources to do the job properly.

The commission is made up of representatives from students, parents, teachers, non-professional staff, administration and community members.

Gillie suggested that each member receive unstipulated amounts as an honorarium to compensate for time spent away from work.

Fisher said he doesn't receive extra compensation for attending board meetings during business hours and there's no reason why the commission should.

If Gillie wants to hold afternoon meetings, then costs must come out of the commission's budget, he said.

Trustee Susan Brice pointed out that most of the commission members are employed by the school district and asked who pays the salaries of substitutes during afternoon commission meetings.

She was told by assistant superintendent Glen Walls the cost of substitute teachers and nonprofessional staff is being billed to the commission

GOALKEEPER Jim Greenwell of New Westminster Salmonbellies was thorn in side of Victoria Shamrocks in Western Lacrosse Assoication game at Memorial Arena Wednesday as he made 47 saves in 15-11 Salmonbelly victory. Here he stops Rick Baker (17) of Shamrocks. Baker had three goals in losing cause.

T-MEN WANT PLAYERS, CASH FOR ALEXANDER

Belted by Bellies, Rocks hit bottom

By BILL WALKER,
Times Staff

Victoria Shamrocks lost on two fronts Wednesday night. One defeat they can't get back. On the other, they may get a reprieve.

First, the Irish got beaten 15-11 by a good New Westminster Salmonbelly team in a regularly scheduled Western Lacrosse Association game at Memorial Arena, and now are at rock bottom, tied with Nanaimo.

Second, they also lost in committee in their latest bid to get scoring star Kevin Alexander from Nanaimo Timbermen.

The New Westminster victory was well enough deserved in the end reckoning. The Salmonbellies, showing a strong, well-balanced club and using the Shamrocks' own fast break, pulled away in the final period in a game in which the Shamrocks came close, but never actually looked like winning.

It was the seventh victory in eight games for the Salmonbellies who now lead by eight points over Vancouver Burrards and Coquitlam Adanacs.

Burrards moved into a second-place tie with Coquitlam by defeating the Adanacs, 12-9.

It was the third straight defeat for the Rocks and the club is in a manpower problem. Since Ron MacNeil went to Nanaimo, Ivan Thompson has retired, Craig Robinson has returned to Ontario, Jerry Kustaski has left the club because of work commitments, Charn Dhillon has temporarily retired, Dan Green is out with shin splints and Norm Baker is playing with a badly-bruised leg.

As to the Alexander case, which has been hanging fire since before the start of the season, Victoria and Nanaimo officials met with WLA commissioner Wally Donaldson Wednesday, but nothing was resolved.

Alexander played for Nanaimo last year, said he did not want to return this season as his business is in Victoria, and the Shamrocks have been trying to make a deal for his services with the Timbermen since then.

Earlier the top line read that the Timbermen wanted $22,000 for Alexander. Shamrock officials have confirmed this.

Last night, the bottom line was that the Timbermen were prepared to accept two players of WLA calibre who would be willing to play in Nanaimo, plus a lump sum payment believed in the neighborhood of $7,000, for Alexander.

The Shamrocks were not prepared to accept this and Timbermen officials were adamant in their stand as they feel the loss of Alexander has cost them about 500 fans a game at the gate.

However, there is still hope for the Shamrocks.

A Shamrock official revealed following the meeting that Donaldson is expected to get back to the two teams today and see if their position has changed.

It is felt by both clubs that the league is losing out by not having Alexander, but that the Timbermen are deserving of some compensation.

As for the game, once again it was bad shooting that got the Shamrocks in a hole and, along with some smart netminding by Salmonbelly goalkeeper Jim Greenwell, particularly in the second period, that kept them there.

In retrospect, perhaps the game story was told in the first few minutes.

The Rocks had possession of the ball for the first 45 seconds, had several good chances to score, but didn't. Then, on the first rush down the floor, Salmonbellies connected. Mario Govorchin fired a long shot past Shamrock goalkeeper Scott Marshall to open scoring at 55 seconds.

At 3:16 of that first period, the Bellies had a 3-0 lead and Marshall was out in favor of Larry Smeltzer.

The Rocks fought back on two goals by Rick Baker and one by Joe McCrea to get even at 3-3, and appeared to have an excellent chance to take the lead when Govorchin was whistled for an elbowing penalty.

But no such luck. It was the Salmonbellies who capitalized on the power play in reverse. They scored two shorthanded goals through Brian Tasker and Bill Mosdell, went ahead 5-3, and led by that margin after one.

Thanks to two quick goals by Jim Lynch, just 16 seconds apart, the Irish closed the gap to 7-6 at 11:01 of the second period and were still in the game.

Bob Tasker and Ken Brown replied for the Salmonbellies to restore the three-goal edge before Ranjit Dillon, making his first start since the opening of the season, got one back for the Rocks who trailed 9-7 after two.

The Salmonbellies put it away with the first three goals of the third period, all by the 3:52 mark.

Eric Cowieson, Brian Tasker and Govorchin each scored two goals for the winners, while others went to Len Cimminelli, Bob Tasker, Paul Dalmonte, Brown, Mosdell, Ivan Tuura and Ken Sim.

Rick Baker and Lynch each had three goals for the Shamrocks. Rookie Rhys Wicks of Esquimalt Legion had a pair, his first in the WLA, and Jim Boyd, also a Legion recruit, had his first.

New Westminster's Wayne Goss had five assists and now has 884 career assists, breaking the previous record held by New Westminster's Paul Parnell of 880.

Mound powerhouse one Budget worry

To make visitors feel welcome, normal practice would be to dote on "who's coming."

But these aren't normal times for Victoria Budgets, and the coach of Canada's defending senior men's softball champions is more concerned about who won't be around when Victoria's "Super Series" schedule starts Friday.

Saskatoon's pitching-powerful All-o-matic A's will be the first of six highly-regarded teams scheduled to visit Royal Athletic Park this summer. Saskatoon faces Budgets in doubleheaders to start at 7 p.m. both Friday and Saturday.

The concern for Budget field boss Harvey Stevenson is his own lineup. The once-heavy balance and depth has been eroded by injuries.

Catcher Sonny Phillips suffered torn knee ligaments and utility infielder Randy Benn came up with a severely sprained leg during Budgets' recent swing into Arizona. To top it off, Bob Walton, a newcomer at first base who has been belting out hits in impressive fashion, was added to the injury list when he injured his shoulder in Tacoma last weekend.

Walton is a doubtful starter Friday and Stevenson may be forced to shift veteran Bob Holness from shortstop to first base.

Fortunately for Budgets, their mound staff is sound. Dave Wilson, Mark Smith, Andy Konopacki and Dave Ruthowsky all have been performing well.

Stevenson sees the first Super Series matchup as a test between two teams "with the best pitching in Canada."

With Gene McWillie, Rob Guenter and Dale Gunderson throwing, Saskatoon may be the club to challenge Victoria's lengthy domination of Canadian softball. Guenter had a 0.53 earned-run average last season, McWillie (obtained in the off season) was .125 and Gunderson 1.86.

Saskatoon is managed by former Victorian Don Funk, who played in the Stuffy McGinnis League for several years and also officiated in both softball and hockey before moving to the Prairies a few years ago.

Big blows mark seven-run inning

Catcher Tom Robertson and first baseman Paul Morrison made their single hits count while helping Seaboard Construction to a 9-4 victory over Tally-Ho in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's Softball League game Wednesday at Central Park.

In the other game, John Underwood smashed a grand-slam homer to spark Juan de Fuca Merchants to an 8-1 romp over K&R Sooke.

Robertson hit a triple and Morrison tagged a double, each scoring once and driving in two runs, to key the seven-run third inning.

Barry Wilkin scattered seven hits for the win.

Underwood's blast highlighted a five-run second inning for Merchants while Len Carolan picked up the victory by striking out four batters and yielding only five hits.

At Hyacinth Park, Island Dryco Breakers nudged VI 90 4-3 and Pirates tripped Combos 7-2 in Victoria Senior Women's League play.

Ann Jones threw a three-hitter for Breakers while Doreen Newton hit a two-run triple and scored the winning run on an error.

KNEE OPERATION

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Franz Beckenbauer, New York Cosmos' mercurial midfielder, underwent successful surgery Wednesday to repair cartilage in his right knee that will keep him out of action for a minimum of eight weeks.

Velox claims double win

Chicago's Griffins got their B.C. rugby tour off to a shaky start Wednesday when Saanich Velox of the Vancouver Island Union handed them a double loss at Centennial Stadium.

Velox took the first division match 11-6 while the seconds rolled up a convincing 17-0 win.

Griffins, who play Castaways on Friday night before heading for the Mainland, were stubborn in both matches.

In the first division contest, the Chicago side started with a blistering attack and hemmed the Velox squad in for 15 minutes after the opening kick-off.

The Griffins failed to tally, however, as Velox held on to keep the match scoreless at the half.

Cain Straith opened scoring in the second half, putting Velox ahead with a penalty goal, and then the Saanich squad took the play and quickly racked up two tries with Doug Branter and Darryl Noulette diving over to score.

The Chicago side rallied late in the game with Jeff Kaiser scoring between the posts and Marty Terry converting, but were unable to crack the Velox defence a second time.

A lack of experience was the story in the opening second-division match, with Griffins shut out despite some hard running attacks.

Scoring for Velox were Paul Connoly, with two tries, George Bombezin, with a try and Cliff Irving with a convert and penalty kick.

Griffins meet Castaways at the University of Victoria's Wallace field Friday. The seconds play at 5 p.m. and the firsts meet at 7.

Otterstrom spark in Burrard victory

VANCOUVER — Eric Otterstrom scored three goals to pace Vancouver Burrards to a 12-9 Western Lacrosse Association win over Coquitlam Adanacs Wednesday night.

Terry Bingley added two goals for the Burrards, while Mike McMillan, Dave Litzenberger, Mike Holden, Steve Lalevne, Stuart Aird, Doug Hayes and Dan Perrault added singles.

Coquitlam's Gord Quilty scored twice with singles from Jim Aitchison, Mike Valastin, Moe Jodoin, Fred Klomp, Jim Civiglia, Dan Wilson and Tim Kelly.

Burrards goaltender Dave Evans stopped 44 shots, while John Lewis and Greg Thomas combined for 36 saves in the Coquitlam net.

Villeneuve sets torrid pace

MONTE CARLO, Monaco (AP) — Gilles Villeneuve of Berthierville, Que., set a record-shattering pace in his Ferrari today to grab provisional pole position for Sunday's Monaco Grand Prix from his South African teammate Jody Scheckter.

Villeneuve was timed in one minute 26.91 seconds at an average speed of 85.19 m.p.h. for the twisting, switchback circuit.

Players aim for Vistas berths

Vancouver Island's finest soccer talent will be on display tonight for an exhibition match at Royal Athletic Park.

Kickoff is at 7.

The purpose of the match is to give coach Bob English a final look before selecting the Vistas (Vancouver Island Soccer Teams All-Stars) side to face Bristol City of the English League's first division in an international exhibition match at the same site Monday.

Bristol City will meet the Vistas after playing Vancouver Whitecaps on Saturday at Empire Stadium.

Playing for the Whites in tonight's contest are Steve Akam, Les Malbone, Greg Mellish, Kim Blank, Dave Secco, Russ Rimmer, Drew Porter, Mike Collis, John Leier, Rob Williams and Joe Poulton.

Lining up for the Blues are Ted van Waes, Tim Atchner, Steve Carroll, Brian Robinson, Daryl Hooker, Steve Moss, John McGuire, Steve Forslund, George Pakos, Garnet Moen and Ray Telford.

Grant Darley, Howie Kirk, Brock Coupar, Frank Woods and George Hind were named as substitutes.

CAHA refused peanuts but NHL gets millions

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has forbidden bodychecking in age levels below peewee.

The association also announced at the annual meeting Wednesday a four-man committee to study a federal report on minor hockey.

The report, critical of the CAHA's player development program, was written by Mr. Justice John Urie of the Supreme Court of Canada and submitted March 10 to Iona Campagnolo, then-minister of state, fitness and amateur sports. Campagnolo, Liberal candidate in the British Columbia riding of Skeena, lost her seat in the federal general election Tuesday.

However, Gord Renwick of Cambridge Ont., past-chairman of the CAHA, told a news conference the association was positive about the report but that he was "a little critical of the constant barrage of inquiries thrown at hockey from both the federal and provincial governments."

"When we ask for money for our development program, we're hammered on the head about the government's austerity program," he said. "But then, two months later, a report criticizes us for not doing anything about it (player development)."

"The government goes out and throws $20 million to the pros, but we couldn't squeeze an extra $30,000 or $40,000 out of them."

Earlier this year, Campagnolo announced a plan to offer $18.5 million in Loto Canada earnings to Canadian cities hoping of acquiring National Hockey League franchises.

Renwick said that if the CAHA implemented all of the programs suggested in the report, "we could be talking $10 million."

The association's new bodychecking rule will be enforced with two-minute penalties.

In another move to reduce injuries, the CAHA's representative with the Canadian Standards Association, Albert Watkins, said hockey helmets and face masks must meet CSA approval beginning March 1, 1980. No player will be allowed to compete after that date if the masks do not have a plastic piece indicating the approval.

Earlier Wednesday, the excutive director of the Quebec Ice Hockey Federation said his organization's charge that the CAHA lacks leadership in hockey development has already produced results.

Arther Lessard had said Monday that things done — or not done — by the CAHA were hurting Quebec's program and that unless the federation got veto power, it would cease active membership with the national body.

The CAHA also ruled Wednesday that arenas will be allowed to place advertisements on boards surrounding the ice surface.

Hal Lewis, CAHA director of administration, said new feelings on the issue surfaced at the 1977 world junior championship in Montreal, where a contract with the International Ice Hockey Federation permitted such ads.

Also on Wednesday, first-vice president Frank MacKinnon of Carman, Man., was elected full-time CAHA chairman. The chairman's post was created in a restructuring of officers on Tuesday and left the president responsible to the board of directors.

Cruyff's debut most impressive

By The Canadian Press

Midfielder Johan Cruyff made an impressive debut for Los Angeles Aztecs in a North American Soccer League game Wednesday, although there was no immediate dividend in crowd support in Pasadena, Calif.

The Dutchman scored two goals in the first seven minutes to lead the Aztecs to a 3-0 win over Rochester Lancers before 9,735 fans in the 100,000-seat Rose Bowl.

In three previous home games, the Aztecs averaged 6,800 fans.

Elsewhere, Edmonton Drillers beat Philadelphia Fury 2-1, Detroit Express shaded California Surf 2-1and Washington Diplomats beat New England Tea Men 3-1. Ipswich Town of the First Division English League downed Minnesota Kicks 1-0 in an exhibition game.

Cruyff, the most valuable player of the 1974 World Cup matches and the only player voted Europe's top soccer player three times, came off a six-month retirement to join the Aztecs for a reported $700,000 a year multi-year contract.

The 32-year-old forward scored his goals in the first seven minors of action. The Aztec defence, which has given up nine goals in eight games this season, dominated the rest of the match.

At Edmonton, substitute forward John Anton's goal with 12 minutes left gave the Drillers their win over the Fury before 8,213 fans.

The Drillers, who moved into first place in the American Conference West, evened their season's record at 5-5.

Hans Kraay Jr., son of the Edmonton coach, opened scoring in the 15th minute, knocking Jan Goossens' rebound past goalkeeper Keith Van Eron.

SOUNDS LIKE "aw sugar" but Philadelphia goaltender Keith Van Eron's words with himself may not be as sweet. Expression mirrors what he thought after allowing goal that provided Edmonton Drillers with 2-1 North American Soccer League victory in Alberta capital Wednesday. (CP Wirephoto).

Two Victorians make nationals

OTTAWA — Two Victorians are on the national men's and women's volleyball teams which will embark May 30 on a gruelling 20-day exhibition tour to China, Korea and Japan to hone up for the Pan-American Games in July.

Al Kostiuk and Louise Harrison will make the trip with the national squads.

Ian Stoddart, executive-director of the Canadian Amateur Volleyball Association, said today that both teams have undergone complete roster changes since the Montreal Olympics in 1976 and are still in the development stage.

"It's an excellent opportunity to sharpen skills against some of the best volleyball teams in the world," Stoddart said.

Both teams will face tough competition at the Games in Puerto Rico.

The men have to contend with Cuba, Brazil, Mexico and the United States, which ended ahead of Canada's 20th-place finish at the world championships last fall.

The women, who ended in 14th place, are in a similar situation with Cuba, the United States, Brazil, Peru and Mexico.

Other members of the men's team are Don Saxton of Plenty, Sask; Charles Parkinson of Vancouver; Tom Jones of Mission; Paul Gratton of Ottawa; Richard Macdonald, Al Taylor and Mark Kolodziey of Calgary; Dave Hutchison of Fredericton; Stelio De Rocco of Toronto; Jean-Claude Meilleur and Stefan Joseph of Montreal and Richard Bacon of Wolfville, N.S.

Included on the women's team are Mary Robertson and Audrey Vandervelden of Vancouver; Joanne Lacass of Montreal; Denise Guay of Jonquiere, Que.; Mylene Camur of Ottawa; Helen Vukovich of Sault Ste Marie, Ont.; Donna Baydock of Winnipeg; Louise Harrison of Victoria; Monica Hitchcock of Fredericton; Karin Maessen of Halifax; Val Campbell of Calgary and Lynne Tremblay of Baie Comeau, Que.

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves have announced that catcher-first baseman Dale Murphy will enter hospital for tests on his ailing left knee, and pitcher Larry McWilliams has been placed on the 21-day disabled list.

Old favorites step aside for youth

max low

Just a few weeks ago, we came out with a headline boasting National Rugby Team Has That Island Flavor.

Well, it still has. But that flavor has changed somewhat as players from all over Canada prepare today and Friday for Saturday's big national team trial match.

Gone from the list of tried and tested starters are names like Mick Eckardt of James Bay and Cowichan Club teammates Pat Simmons and Gudmund Gudmundseth. Also, Jim Wenman of Oak Bay and K.C. Walt of James Bay won't be out there and two very experienced hookers — Ray Rogers of James Bay and Larry Chung of Castaways — will be merely reserves when Canada kicks off against The Rest at 7 p.m. Saturday at the University of Victoria's Centennial Stadium.

But the number of ingredients that make up "That Island Flavor" will still be the same. We still have 11 — four on the Canada team, two on The Rest side and five in the Reserves — out of the 36 hopefuls from across the country bidding for berths.

It's just that the flavor has switched from the mellow of age to the tang of youth. Simmons and Eckardt, both in their 30s and with vast representative rugby behind them, are moving over for younger players and Gudmundseth, out earlier in the season with injuries, just doesn't feel he's playing well enough to be considered. Wenman and Walt would like to play but have both been plagued by injuries suffered in league matches.

Rogers and Chung find themselves in the reserves so that the five selectors can take a look at young hookers Mike Luke of Newfoundland and Bernie Bonenberg of Quebec.

Island youngsters replacing those oldsters on The Rest lineup are lock Chris Fowler, 20, and his Oak Bay Wanderers teammate flanker Dennis Sinnott, 22.

The four more experienced Island players on the Canada team are Hans de Goede, just back from playing the winter with Welsh club Cardiff, his James Bay clubmate Gary Johnston, Dwaine Van Eeuwan of Cowichan and Gary Grant of UVic.

Islanders with Rogers and Chung on the reserve list for Saturday are James Bay winger Chuck Shergold, scrum-half Ted Zinkan of Cowichan and promising young standoff-half Pat Trelawny of Oak Bay.

Saturday's trial match (after which 21 players will be selected to go to Toronto to train for the Canada-America game at York University on June 9) will be the culmination of the first national team training camp ever to be held in Victoria.

The training camp got under way today with practice sessions for both the Canada and The Rest sides on separate UVic fields.

The same kind of practice sessions will be held early Friday morning, followed by a team meeting, films and more practices and films in the afternoon.

On Saturday, there will be light practice sessions, a weight-training demonstration in the McKinnon Building at 1:30 p.m. and then, of course, the big game at Centennial Stadium at 7 p.m.

The Canadian team, which not only meets the United States in the third annual test match after winning one each in the first two years but is also scheduled to go on a tour of Britain and France in September, gets its Island flavor from not only the players. National team coach is Dr. Bruce Howe of UVic and manager is well-known Victoria rugby personality, Peter Clarke.

Coach Howe is delighted with the way things are shaping up for the trial match on Saturday.

"We're trying something a little different this year," explains Howe, who is also one of the national selectors. "We're putting on the camp two weeks before the match with the States and also we're looking at some young promising players who may not quite be ready yet and some others challenging for berths.

"It should be interesting."

Canadian driver dies

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Canadian race car driver Russell Gray has died of injuries suffered Sunday when his super-modified car crashed into a retaining wall at the Oswego Speedway.

The 34-year-old Gray, who operated a music shop in Brantford, Ont., died Monday of head and chest injuries suffered when his car hit the wall on the first turn of the paved speedway during a preliminary race.

Track officials believe Gray lost control of his car when his accelerator became stuck.

His death was the fifth at the speedway in 28 years.

Canada takes first cricket win

BIRMINGHAM, England (CP) — Canada won its first match in the World Cup cricket qualifying comptition Wednesday, defeating Malaysia by 44 runs.

With an overnight total of 13 for one wicket against Canada's 185, the Malaysias struggled to 89 for six at lunch and were eventually retired for 141 in 54 overs.

Most of the damage was done by John Vaughan, who took four wickets for 33 runs, and Cecil Marshall, who claimed three for 16.

In a schedule curtailed by rain, a match between East Africa and Papua-New Guinea was abandoned as a draw and Wales was awarded a victory over the Netherlands because of a faster run rate in Tuesday's play.

Denmark defeated Fiji and the United States downed Israel in matches completed Tuesday.

The two teams with the best records in qualifying play will join England, Australia, New Zealand, the West Indies, India and Pakistan in the World Cup final round next month.

Lions sign four

VANCOUVER — Import receiver Thomas Geredine and Canadian linebacker Ron Morehouse were four players signed to Canadian Football league contracts by B.C. Lions Wednesday.

Geredine, 27, played four seasons in the National Football League, two each with Atlanta Falcons and two with Los Angeles Rams, before being released last season. He was Atlanta's fourth-round draft pick in 1974.

Morehouse, 25, played for San Diego State and was one of the Lions' protected players this season. The Vancouver native is five-foot-eleven and 215 pounds.

Also signed were defence backs, import Roy Binion of Northeast Louisana University and Canadian Chris Curran of Western Ontario University.

The Lions training camp opens in Courtenay this weekend.

Five-goal outburst

Damonde Tschritter fired five goals Wednesday to lead Dragons to a 9-0 shutout over Hawks in a Little Boys Field Hockey League game.

Chris Robinson added three goals and Don Bracewell contributed a single.

Panthers and Kings battled to a scoreless deadlock in the other league match.

In the Junior Boys League tussle, Chris Wall scored the lone goal which gave Lions a 1-0 decision over Dragons.

HAZEL McLEARY
. . . heads separation probe

Bowlers to sever U.S. link?

WINNIPEG — Hazel McLeary of Victoria, Women's International Bowling Congress director in Canada, has been appointed to head a committee to study the possibility of separating Canadian administration of both men's and women's tenpin bowling from its U.S.-based governing organizations.

Meanwhile, bowlers from Manitoba, Ontario, Alberta and Quebec qualified during the weekend to form the 12-member Canadian team for the world tenpin championship in Manila in the fall.

The men's squad is led by Winnipeg's Barry Hamilton. Wayne MacKay of Windsor, Ont., Paul Cameron and Jim Kramer, both of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Steve Kuti of Calgary and Jim Rennox of Toronto are the others.

Joanne Walker of Montreal leads the women's team. Other members are Arlene Graham of Calgary, Lillian Hilton of Edmonton, Irene Joyal of Winnipeg, Cathy Townsend of Montreal, Shirley Hoffman of Burlington, Ont., and Shirley Mickoski of Sault Ste. Marie.

Foyt blocks second try for indy cars

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Off-track distractions continued in the spotlight today as cars already qualified for Sunday's Indianapolis 500 got their last pre-race opportunity to use the 2½-mile (four-kilometre) Speedway oval.

The unanswered question was whether 11 non-qualified entries would get a special time trial session and a chance to add their cars to the traditional 33-car field. Bumped from the lineup by faster cars during the final day of qualifying last weekend, the 11 were offered the unprecedented chance Tuesday in a special ruling by the United States Auto Club.

A roadblock, however, was a stipulation that all 33 entries already in the field would have to approve the move in writing, and A. J. Foyt, Indy's only four-time winner, was the major hurdle. Foyt was in Louisville, Ky., Wednesday, watching two of his horses race at Churchill Downs, but a member of his racing team said he was against the idea.

By late Wednesday night, 26 of the 33 entries in the field had approved the special session and the scramble continued into the morning to get signatures from the others, including Foyt.

The move to allow the bumped cars to requalify intensified the battle between USAC and the dissident Championship Auto Racing Teams (CART).

Representatives from the two warring groups were meeting nearby in an apparent peace move, but CART President Pat Patrick slapped at USAC, saying the club, which sanctions Indianapolis and other championship races, should have taken sole responsibility to order extra qualifying, instead of passing the decision to the starting field.

At the same time, he announced that all 19 CART entries in the race had agreed to the USAC proposal because "we sincerely believe that every car unfairly removed from the field should have an equal opportunity to qualify."

Veteran driver Al Loquasto said he was disgusted with what he considered USAC's lack of effort to get the signatures.

"Pat Patrick heard about this situation, got on his airplane, flew here and had all the CART signatures in a half hour," Loquasto said. "Meanwhile, USAC sent me, Jerry Karl and John Martin — and none of us are even USAC members — to get all the signatures.

"CART has 19 entries in the field and USAC's got 14. Seven USAC entries signed, and me, Jerry and John were the ones that signed them. USAC signed nobody. What does that tell you about USAC?"

MOST BELMONT BETTORS LIKE CHANCE TO CUT BACK LOSSES

NEW YORK (AP) — The good news Wednesday at Belmont Park was that a bettor could lose as little as one dollar a race.

New York Racing Association officials said it was the first track in the country to offer a $1 bet on regular win, place or show wagering. The standard minimum wager at any other track in the United States is $2.

The new system was not without its difficulties. The first race was delayed for 10 minutes and the tote board was not operating several minutes before the start of the second race.

Bettor reaction to the system varied.

"Good. I can dollar them to death," said a 62-year-old retired railroad crew dispatcher. "If I win, then I can do something else; I believe in money management."

Said Donald Parkin, a 59-year-old shipping clerk: "If I spend $18 in a day, so I'll cut it down to $9. You can't beat the game. You know that."

The $1 bet was seen as a last-chance opportunity to some bettors, and a way to multiply one's chances by others. Bigger bettors looked at the $1.05 minimum payoff, and reacted with derision.

"What the hell good is it?" asked a retired 65-year-old technician. "You get very little back. If I'm going to win, I want to win some money. I mean, what am I here for, for the sport?"

Said Ed Elliott, a 70-year-old retired construction worker, "There's no gamble. There's no profit. I might play it (the $1 bet) on a longshot, but that's the only time I'll ever do it."

George Thomas, a mutuel clerk for the last 18 years, said he expected the new system to save time for clerks and bettors, although a track spokesman acknowledged Wednesday, "It's got bugs. It's new."

Claremont collects Island track honor

Claremont continued to be the dominating force in local track and field circles, grabbing 16 berths in the British Columbia high school track and field championships while winning the two-day Island meet which concluded Wednesday at Centennial Stadium.

Victoria-area champion Claremont accumulated 360½ points while runner-up Mt. Douglas had 270.

Mt. Douglas and Dunsmuir both qualified 10 athletes for the B.C. meet scheduled June 1-2 at Burnaby's Swangard Stadium, while St. Michael's University School will be represented by six athletes and Oak Bay by five.

Laura Mahoney of Dunsmuir picked up the award for the outstanding female athlete. She set a record while winning the 200-metres with a time of 24.8 seconds and also won the 100.

Judy Tobacco of Mt. Douglas managed to qualify in four events, a high for the meet.

The male athlete award was shared by Tony Theriault of Claremont and Terry Bateman of Mt. Douglas for outstanding performances in the 5,000 metres and 1,500-metre steeplechase, respectively.

Moe draws heavy fine

NEW YORK (AP) — Doug Moe, coach of San Antonio Spurs, has been fined $3,000 for "conduct detrimental to the league," National Basketball Association commissioner Larry O'Brien has announced.

It was the highest cash fine ever levied against an NBA coach.

The action was taken because of Moe's critical comments about officials following Friday's night semi-final playoff game in which Washington eliminated the Spurs 99-97.

O'Brien notified Moe of the fine by telegram, stating that "the type of conduct displayed Friday evening in post-game interviews cannot be tolerated, and requires a severe penalty."

O'Brien also said that close and thorough review of videotape of the game indicated that Moe's criticism of specific calls by the officials was unfounded.

Holmes, Towner spark Farmers

Ron Holmes tied things up with a home run in the sixth inning and Don Towner drove in the winning run a few minutes later as Farmer Construction nipped Lumberworld 4-3 in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game Wednesday at Lambrick Park.

Towner's ground-rule double gave Terry Adams a second straight victory and Holmes provided good relief in the seventh frame.

Junior A's win

COQUITLAM (CP) — Outstanding goaltending by Brian Celli paced Coquitlam Junior Adanacs to a 10-4 Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League victory over Richmond Roadrunners Wednesday night.

Celli stopped 38 shots, while his team-mates peppered the Richmond goal with 52 shots.

Mike Reelie, Ken Storoshenko and Don Symons each scored two goals for Coquitlam while Dave Stark scored twice for Richmond.

Make New England read 'Hartford'

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — New England Whalers are not only joining a new league but are getting a new name.

Upon entry into the National Hockey League for the 1979-80 regular season, the former World Hockey Association franchise will be known as Hartford Whalers.

Bruins to work with Binghamton

BOSTON (AP) — Binghamton Dusters of the American Hockey League will be the top farm club for Boston Bruins in the 1979-80 season.

Harry Sinden, general manager of the National Hockey League team, has also announced that Pat Kelly will coach the Dusters. Last season he was coach of Rochester Americans.

DATSUN LEADS WITH LEAST NUMBER OF REPAIRS

We read this in the April 16 issue of "Autoweek" and we couldn't have said it better.
You may have heard about Datsun quality and pre-testing.
These are no longer promises, they're practically guarantees.

AUTOWEEK, APRIL 16, 1979

"DATSUN LEADS LIST OF WARRANTY WINNERS."

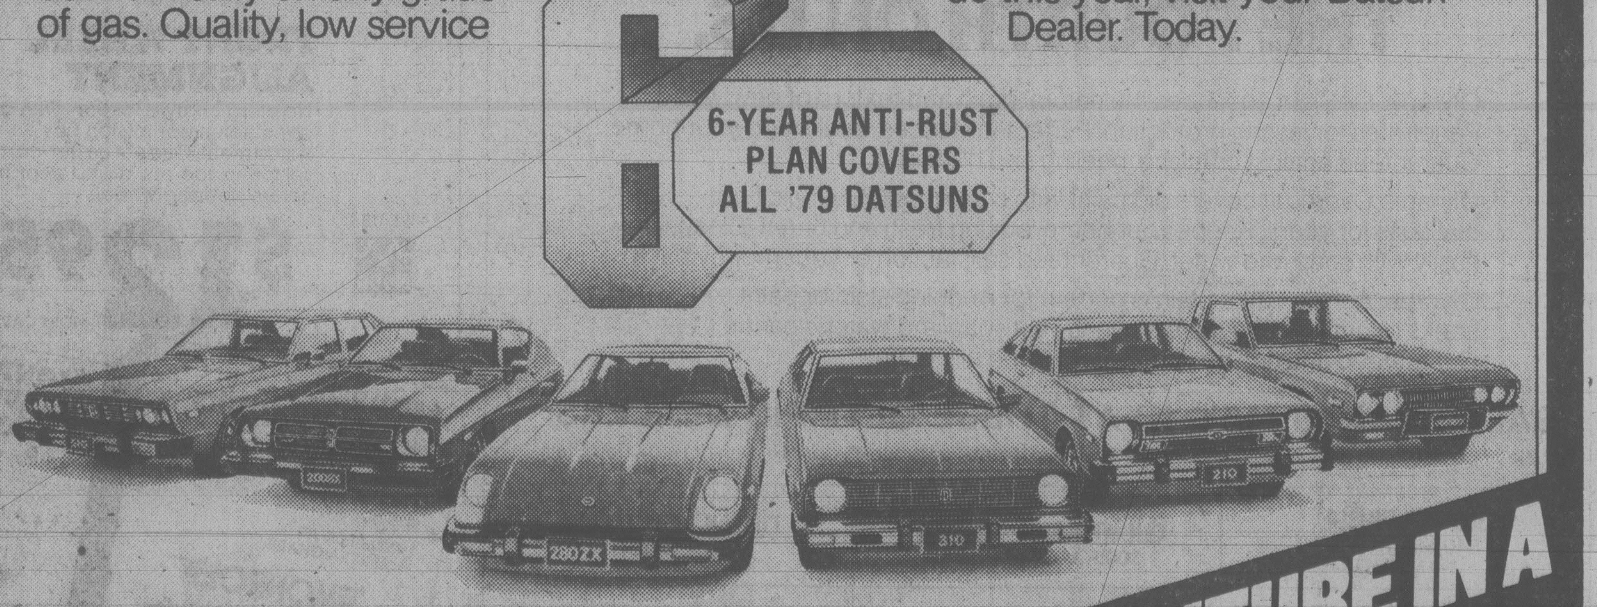
"Exclusive actuarial information provided to Autoweek by the North American Dealer Group . . . shows that Datsun ranked number one for least number of repairs of all manufacturers selling cars in the nation."

"A strong contribution factor to the position each maker had in the top six also is the cost of repairs as well as combined new and used repair frequency."

"The data represents information gathered by the (warranty) company in the form of claims in 191,212 expired service contracts on all makes and models sold in the U.S. over the past five-year period."

Here in Canada we go further: we back all '79 Datsun cars and trucks with 6 full years of rust protection at no extra charge—no other maker does. And we design Datsuns to run economically on any grade of gas. Quality, low service costs and fuel economy, they're all part of a total plan to help your Datsun hold its value for a long, long time.

If you want to feel as good about your car next year as you do this year, visit your Datsun Dealer. Today.



THERE'S MORE FUTURE IN A DATSUN.

'Super strong' after rest, Ranger cuts down Twins

By The Associated Press

The first clue that Al Oliver was in for an extraordinary night came in batting practice before Texas Rangers met Minnesota Twins in an American League baseball game Wednesday.

After hitting three home runs and driving in four runs to spark the Rangers to a 7-2 win over the Twins, Oliver said: "I hit one out of the park that broke the bat; another one broke the bat and hit the wall. I felt super strong."

The 11-year veteran hovered near the .400 mark the first month of the season but had been in a mini-slump lately. He had nine hits in his 48 latest at-bats going into Wednesday's series-ender with Minnesota.

"In April I was embarrassing the other guys on the team because I was getting all the hits," he said. "In May, they've been embarrassing me. But this game was great. I hope I'm back on the track again."

Oliver, a 32-year-old outfielder became the first Texas player to ever hit three homers in a game at Arlington Stadium, and his 3-for-4 night raised his season's average to .304.

Manager Pat Corrales put Oliver in the lineup as a designated hitter Monday, and held him out of the lineup Tuesday.

"With the day off, and the rest, I felt super strong," Oliver said.

All of Texas' runs came on homers. Oliver and Pat Putnam hit two-run homers in the first, Mike Jorgensen hit a one-run homer in the fourth, and Oliver made curtain calls for solo homers in the fifth and eighth.

Ferguson Jenkins of Chatham, Ont., pitched his fifth complete game of the season and raised his record to 5-2. After opening the season with a 4-0 record, Wednesday night was his seventh straight start in search of the fifth win.

Elsewhere, Cleveland Indians beat Toronto Blue Jays 4-3, Baltimore Orioles downed Boston Red Sox 5-2, Milwaukee Brewers nipped California Angels 1-0, Detroit Tigers defeated New York Yankees 4-3 and Chicago White Sox topped Oakland A's 6-1. Kansas City and Seattle were not scheduled.

In the National League, right-hander Mike LaCoss said manager John McNamara waved his magic wand again — but Dave Collins and company had something to do with it, too.

LaCoss, unbeaten this year, chalked up his fifth victory for Cincinnati by three-hitting San Francisco, while Collins, Johnny Bench and Ray Knight were hitting home runs off Vida Blue in a 5-0 drubbing of the Giants.

It washed away the bad taste of the Reds' 12-2 loss 24 hours earlier and widened their Western Division lead to 2½ games over the Giants and Houston Astros.

"We haven't lost a game I've started yet," said LaCoss, 23. "It seems like Mac waves a magic wand when I pitch."'

In other games, Atlanta Braves edged Houston 6-5, St. Louis Cardinals beat Philadelphia Phillies 3-1, Los Angeles Dodgers topped San Diego Padres 4-2, and Montreal Expos blanked Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0. Chicago at New York was rained out.

Steve Rogers scattered eight hits and Tony Perez and Warren Cromartie knocked in runs to help the Expos beat Pittsburgh.

'The bird' to strengthen wing

DETROIT (AP) — Mark (The Bird) Fidrych is back on the 21-day disabled list.

Detroit Tigers made the move on their sore-armed pitcher Wednesday after he was examined by doctors at Ford Hospital.

"Mark is free of pain in his shoulder and his old injury is apparently healed," said Dr. Edwin R. Guise Jr. "But because of his long period of inactivity, he has a weakness of the muscles in his upper arm and shoulder.

"He will now go through a program of exercises with weights and resistence devises to restore his strength."

George, Billy to thrash things out

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Billy Martin's anticipated settlement of the civil suit filed against him by sports writer Ray Hagar will not necessarily affect his status with New York Yankees next year, owner George Steinbrenner has indicated.

Steinbrenner said he expected to talk with his ex-manager soon. "I don't know all the facts yet," the owner said. "We will call Billy in as soon as possible and thrash this whole thing out."

Hagar dropped the criminal complaint of battery on Tuesday, clearing the way for Martin to travel to Reno to negotiate an out-of-court settlement of the civil suit. With the criminal complaint still pending, Martin faced possible arrest if he went to Reno. Now that threat has been eliminated.

The sports writer, who alleged that Martin assaulted him during an interview last Nov. 10, said he had agreed to a settlement of $8,000 and a public apology from Martin.

Steinbrenner had indicated during spring training that Martin would have to be exonerated of the criminal and civil charges filed by Hagar in order to be rehired in 1980. At that time, he said a settlement would not be sufficient. But the Yankee owner amended that somewhat Wednesday, saying, "I couldn't tell him not to settle."

Martin is out of the country.

BRIAN HEANEY MOVES WEST

Guess who's No. 1 now?

By JIM CRERAR
Times staff

Once upon a time there was a conference called the Canada West that was the weak link in Canadian college basketball.

Each year the CWUAA sent its best team to the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union championships and each year, it seemed, the team lost in the first round, lost in the consolation round and quietly limped off into the sunset.

No more.

With the emergence of UVic Vikings and Calgary Dinosaurs as national basketball powers (both were in this spring's national finals), it's apparent that in the west, the sun also rises.

Next season, the sun will undoubtedly shine on the Alberta Golden Bears as well as the Vikings and Dinos because of the arrival of a new coach in Brian Heaney.

Heaney is leaving St. Mary's University Huskies in Halifax to coach the Bears and co-ordinate Alberta's 12-sport varsity program.

Basketball fans here are all too familiar with the Huskies, something of a nemesis to the Vikings. The Halifax school, in fact, narrowly beat UVic in the championship final at this year's CIAU tourney.

The championship was the third nationally for the Huskies under Heaney, a 33-year-old native of Brooklyn, N.Y., noted for his driving desire for excellence.

He single-handedly built St. Mary's into a basketball power after taking over as coach 1971 following an outstanding playing career there. His teams dominated the tough Atlantic Conference and made the national finals in 1973, '74, '75, '77, '78 and '79. They won the Canadian title in 1973 and the last two years.

What took Heaney to Edmonton?

"It's exactly what I was looking for," he says. "It's a challenging job but I think I'm equal to the challenge."

There'll be challenges, to be sure. One will come from coach Ken Shields' Vikings. Another will come from Gary Howard's Dinosaurs. And don't be surprised if a third comes from Peter Mullins' UBC Thunderbirds. The usually-tough T-Birds lost heavily through injuries and graduation last year and are certain to improve.

Dunn signs two-year contract

VANCOUVER (CP) — Assistant coach Dave Dunn has agreed to a two-year contract with Vancouver Canucks, the National Hockey League team has announced.

Dunn, 30, joined the Canucks prior to the 1978-79 season after Harry Neale was hired as head coach. Dunn had previously played in the NHL and World Hockey Association with various teams.

Two-tour concept for pro golf in '81

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Commissioner Deane Beman has announced that men's professional golf likely will start a senior tour in 1980 and will split its national tour into two segments by 1981.

Beman told a news conference that the two-tour concept had come from the players themselves and that the tournament players board had instructed him to set up the tour for the senior tournaments.

Beman said the major tour would consist of no more than 35 tournaments with purses of $300,000 or more. It would involve the top 100 players in the money list.

The secondary tour would have about the same number of events with minimum purses of $100,000 to $150,000.

"It was a great surprise to me that the players came to me in New Orleans earlier this year and felt the tour should be shortened and split into two segments, Beman said. "And the majority of players favoring it are not in the top 100."

Beman said he surveyed "in the neighborhood of 50 seniors," and the vast majority favored a separate tour for players 50 years and older.

He named such seniors as Julius Boros, Don January, Tommy Bolt, and Ken Venturi as favoring the seniors tour.

Beman said he thought the seniors tour could support a maximum of six events in 1980.

Wales in draw with England

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — Hardworking Wales surprisingly held England to a 0-0 draw Wednesday in the British soccer championship before 70,220 fans.

The draw gave Wales a chance to take the championship outright for the first time since 1937. Wales meets Northern Ireland on Friday and England plays Scotland on Saturday.

The England team, with Ken Sansom and Laurie Cunningham both making their debuts, had the ball often enough to have won comfortably.

The Welsh did little attacking but scurried effectively in mid-field and defended with determination to hold out against England's almost-total dominance.

San Diego fans help pay for Bill

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Less than two weeks after the addition of centre Bill Walton, pro basketball's most valuable player of 1977-78, San Diego Clippers have raised their ticket prices — with the best seat in the house now costing $11.

The National Basketball Association club announced the ticket increase Wednesday, raising the best seats by $2 while general admission was raised by $1.

Tickets for the 1979-80 season will be priced at $11, $9, $7 and $5, up from $9, $8, $6 and $4.

Irv Levin, the Clippers' president, said the "modest increase reflects our higher operating costs."

U.S. asbestos intervention eyed

QUEBEC (UPC) — The U.S. state department may make an unprecedented intervention in the Quebec government's efforts to expropriate the American-owned Asbestos Corp., a U.S. Senate spokesman said Wednesday.

The 101-year-old Asbestos Corp., 54.6 per cent owned by General Dynamics Corp. of St. Louis, is Quebec's second largest producer of asbestos with sales of 300,000 tons of fibre annually around the world.

Its mines produce 12 per cent of the non-Communist world's asbestos.

An expropriation bill is to be given second reading in the Quebec National Assembly Thursday. Three readings are needed before it becomes law.

Lee Verstandig, an aide to U.S. Senator John Chaffe of Rhode Island, said Wednesday the state department could become involved in the expropriation negotiations. Quebec is offering no more than $42 per share for Asbestos shares, but General Dynamics maintains each share is worth slightly less than $100.

"The State Department might provide some assistance in the negotiations, playing a broker role that will buy time and find more compatible means to resolve this problem," Verstandig said.

Chaffee urged the state department to take an active role in the negotiations in a recent speech to the U.S. Senate.

Verstandig said state department involvement on behalf of American companies in foreign countries is not unusual, although it had never been done before with a Canadian government.

State department officials were not available for comment.

Chaffee's office said he believes the nationalization action by Levesque's Parti Quebecois government would affect Canadian and American business relations.

That view was echoed Wednesday by Missouri senator John Danforth. "Such expropriating action would have far-reaching implications in the United States-Canada business and financial communities.

"Thus it is my sincere hope that the government of Premier Levesque will reconsider the current legislative procedure for the acquisition of Asbestos Corp. and resume the negotiations," he said Wednesday.

"This action is something you expect when you get involved in South America or Africa . . . It might have detrimental effects on the investment plans of many U.S. companies," he said through an aide.

Guy Fiske, executive vice-president of General Dynamics, said Quebec's determination to push the expropriation bill was a "shocking event".

'Fantasy Island' alive in Toronto

TORONTO (UPC) — Gregg Acheson, a former real estate salesman, has opened a fantasy manufacturing business selling expensive customized dreams to the rich.

Acheson, molding his business after the televison series Fantasy Island is selling a range of cloak and dagger dreams-come-true to clients willing to fork out from $800 to $10,000.

Acheson says his business, Stairwell Inc., offers customers total suprise. Having paid his money the customer may be lured to the scene of what appears to be a dockside murder, then followed by an exotic woman or get mysterious phone calls until he is no longer sure where fantasy ends and reality begins.

"All I can say is that it may be dangerous, that it will be an adventure. It could involve things that appear illegal," Acheson said.

B & W boiler row bubbles

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Hydro's customers may have to pay millions for repairs to boilers that have not been used at the Pickering, Ont., nuclear generating plant, says a utility spokesman.

Hydro returned 36 boilers to manufacturer Babcock and Wilcox Canada Ltd. because hundreds of dents and bends were found in tubes leading to the boilers, but responsibility for the repair bill is disputed.

William Morison, Hydro's director of design and development, said the question of who will pay is the subject of "intense, fairly high-level negotiations . . ."

"The cost is likely to be very high — about $35 million," Morison said.

Trevor Stevenson, corporate secretary for Babcock and Wilcox, said the matter is not simple.

"We're not talking about a one-page document. You're buying a whole engineering system. There are many ramifications and areas to be looked at in this."

Stevenson said the company "can't give a year's guarantee to anything that comes out of the plant," adding that "it doesn't work that way"

The cost of lost production because the boilers were returned will be large, said Morison.

"That's a penalty the power consumers of this province will have to pay."

But he did not give an estimate on the cost of buying outside power and unfilled contracts since the generating station shut down Dec. 2.

Hydro decided to order the boilers from Babcock and Wilcox instead of putting out tenders so the company would stay in business.

Babcock and Wilcox, with 1,500 employees, is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Babcock and Wilcox Co. of New York.

Ont. gunman gives up

GODERICH, Ont. (CP) — A lone gunman who took hostages at the federal government building and kept police at bay for 12 hours surrendered to police early today.

Police put a blanket over the man's head and whisked him away from the building without revealing his identity or saying what charges would be laid against him.

The hostages all escaped uninjured. Most left shortly after the man took over the building.

Earlier in the evening, gunfire ripped through the courthouse square scattering spectators and hitting some with buckshot. Nine were injured, none seriously.

The incident began on a golf course just outside the town. It is believed the man lost his temper and headed into Goderich. A car windshield was shot out and the man, wearing a bandolier full of ammunition, strolled into the Canada Employment Centre about 1 p.m. EDT and herded eight persons into a back room.

Witnesses said he slammed the butt of his gun on a desk and ordered everyone into a back room.

The hostages barricaded the door and escaped by tying drapes together and shinnying to the ground. Police cordoned off the block around the building and turned off power in nearby buildings while they waited.

Byelections planned

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque said Wednesday that two provincial byelections will likely be called within the next few days even if the actual voting day is not until the fall.

Speaking at a press conference, the premier said the likely voting dates are late June or early fall.

The two vacant ridings are Prevost, in the Laurentians north of Montreal, and Beauce-Sud, south of here.

Another riding, Maisonneuve in Montreal, may also be facing a byelection.

Cyclist awarded $450,000

MONTREAL (CP) — An 18-year old motorcyclist almost completely paralysed in a 1977 collision caused by an impaired car driver was awarded damages of $450,000 in Quebec Superior Court Wednesday.

Remi Roy, left a quadriplegic by the collision, is expected to spend the rest of his life in institutions.

Mr. Justice Edouard Martel also awarded $5,910 to Roy's brother Martin, a passenger on the motorcycle. He was not seriously injured.

Hotel files it under 'Clerical Errors'

BRAMPTON, Ont. (CP) — When two ministers began eating and drinking like there was no tomorrow, the manager of a hotel near Toronto International Airport became suspicious.

After discovering the two men were not listed with the United Church of Canada, the manager phoned Peel Regional Police and the two were charged with accommodation fraud.

The men booked in to the hotel after making reservations for two ministers by phone and saying the United Church would pay the bill.

In their first few hours at the hotel, they ran up a $150 bill for food and liquor.

James Edward MacDonald, 24, formerly of Brampton, got three months in jail and Paul Robert Cairns, 21, formerly of Bracebridge, Ont., received 30 days.

Sask. students get cod pointers

FORT SASKATCHEWAN, Alta. (CP) — For the last few weeks, 25 Grade 3 and 4 students in this community just outside Edmonton have been learning about life in Piccadilly, Nfld., and finding it interesting.

"I really liked the hard buns they sent us to eat with the salted fish (cod)," said Melanie Kofluk, 10:

"I wouldn't mind eating that kind of stuff all the time."

Grant Wakark, 9, agreed, and confided he was fascinated with a claw from a lobster that might have considered eating him rather than vice versa.

"It doesn't seem possible — it's almost the same size as our arms and doesn't look anything like the ones in our Safeway."

The claws and cod were just some of the items Deanna Dahl, the children's teacher, brought back from a conference in Trenton, Ont., last month.

Ms. Dahl also brought back a lobster trap, candied molasses, books on Newfoundland birds and a handmade anchor.

As well, there were personal biographies, slides and tape recordings from a Grade 6 class in Piccadilly.

"They sing sort of neat," said Tina Weir, 9:

"It's sort of like a choir and they have a French accent."

The tapes and other artifacts were in an information kit called a Cana-Kit.

Other Cana-Kits were traded between 40 teachers at the April conference in Trenton.

The students in Fort Saskatchewan spent three months preparing their own kit about Fort Saskatchewan and Alberta.

Among the items they sent to Newfoundland was an eight-foot mural of the town of Fort Saskatchewan.

Ms. Dahl said students involved in a similar project last year are still writing to their exchange classroom.

Land costs hit the prairies

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Former Calgary mayor Rod Sykes has blasted planners and local governments for their responses to rising prices in the Alberta housing markets during a speech at the Municipal Management Conference.

"No government responds rapidly and well to innovation and change," he said. "The normal and healthy response is to ignore the problems and pressures for as long as possible and then resist them."

Sykes blamed government resistance for high land and housing costs.

Planning tends to increase the demand for land which can be developed and prices go up rapidly, he said.

MD shortage held

SASKATOON (CP) — Difficulties in training and hiring psychiatrists has created a shortage in Saskatchewan and no short-term solutions are in sight.

Dr. R. C. Bowen, co-ordinator of post-graduate training in psychiatry at the University of Saskatchewan college of medicine, said in an interview that the university has great difficulty attracting qualified students and teachers for psychiatric training.

Home care grants

REGINA (CP) — Grants totalling $5.7 million to 116 home care agencies have been authorized by the provincial government for the current fiscal year, Social Services Minister Herman Rolfes has announced.

Rolfes said the increase in grants for homemaking, meals and home maintenance programs to $4.4 million from $1.9 million last year was caused by the government's paying for the total cost of those services for the first time.

Building shelved

RED DEER (CP) — Plans for a new student residence complex at Red Deer College have been shelved for at least a year, because the college has encountered resistance from the provincial ministry of advanced education which would supply the funds, college president Dr. Bill Forbes said.

Bad work year

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's work force suffered its worst year in 1978, losing 447,000 man-days because of strikes and lockouts, provincial labor department statistics show.

Almost 20,200 of the province's 800,000 workers took part in legal strikes and lockouts.

About 122,222 workers were injured on the job, resulting in 940,000 man-days lost — up 12 per cent over 1977.

Drugs turned in WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitobans turned in about 57,000 doses of outdated drugs to pharmacists during a campaign sponsored by the Manitoba Pharmaceutical Association to reduce the possibility of children being harmed by unneeded medicines stored around the house.

Discharge order

BRANDON (CP) — The Manitoba Clean Environment Commission has ordered Simplot Chemical Co. in Brandon not to discharge liquid effluent into the Assiniboine River between May 14 and Sept. 14. The order applies this year and in future years.

Births decline

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba's birth rate last year was 15.3 per 1,000 residents, the marriage rate was 7.5 and the death rate was 7.6.

There were 16,763 births, 8,232 marriages and 8,345 deaths.

With the exception of the number of deaths, the figures were slightly lower than last year's totals.

Brutality alleged

MOOSE JAW (CP) — A city couple who claim they were beaten and denied medical attention by two city police officers has filed suit against the city, the police commission and two policemen they claim were involved.

In documents filed in Court of Queen's Bench David Greggersen and his wife Ann claim they were stopped by police, pulled from their car and beaten.

Hookers leaving town: Police

EDMONTON (CP) — Police believe their crackdown on prostitutes in the 106th Street area of downtown is persuading about half the hookers to leave town.

"I'd say the push has had a lot of impact," says S. Sgt. Frank Ashworth of the morality squad.

"About three weeks ago, there were about 45 girls working the drag. Now there's 20 out some nights but never all at one time."

He said detectives, squad members and uniformed patrolmen have kept the prostitutes on the move. Some of the prostitutes came from Eastern Canada and the United States.

But more importantly, the police presence is discouraging customers.

Ashworth said embarrassed men are seen speeding from the area when inquisitive policemen start checking identification and asking questions.

"The customers don't want to go down there when the place is crawling with police. So the girls are lucky if they get one trick a night . . .

"So they move out and go to another city."

Grit-Tory coalition urged

Times News Services

The Liberal and Conservative parties should form an unofficial coalition government to preserve national unity and give Canada broad representation in all regions, Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney suggested Wednesday.

Blakeney said a coalition would be the only way to ensure a strong federal goverment in Ottawa in view of the precarious position Prime Minister-elect Joe Clark faces after falling short of 142 seats needed for a majority government.

The results have sparked speculation Clark might seek the support of the Socreds in order to form a majority government.

"The Liberals owe it to Clark ... owe it to Canada to offer support to Clark," said Blakeney, the country's only NDP premier.

Blakeney said without Liberal support Clark's government will be woefully under-represented when Quebec holds its referendum on separatist status sometime in the next two years.

The premier also said that under his proposal the NDP would be the "real opposition" while Pierre Trudeau could keep the title of leader of the Opposition.

Meanwhile, Quebec Premier Rene Levesque said Wednesday that the election results election prove that the only true government for Quebecers is in the Quebec national assembly.

Finding fuel for his separatist arguments in the election of an almost exclusively English-speaking government, Levesque said the election has left Quebecers isolated and rejected.

It destroys the old illusion of French power in Ottawa, he said. "Any effort, however sincere and brilliant it is, to build something like a Quebec power outside Quebec ... is ultimately doomed to failure."

Levesque said English Canada simply decided it wanted an anglophone to lead the country while in Quebec, voters supported a Quebecer "because they felt threatened."

He rejected the interpretation of Liberal leader Claude Ryan that the massive vote in Quebec for the Trudeau Liberals was a vote for federalism, claiming instead that support for Trudeau was no more than "a family vote."

the polarization would help the PQ win its promised referendum on sovereignty-association, Levesque backpedalled.

He said he would not try to play on divisions within the country, but hoped instead that English Canada would readjust its relationship with Quebec.

Hotel barred to press

JASPER, Alta. (CP) — Only a few hours after Joe Clark promised journalists he will run an accessible government, reporters were barred from sleeping in the same hotel as the Progressive Conservative leader.

A handful of reporters and photographers attempted Wednesday to check into the Jasper Park Lodge, where Clark is staying until Sunday, but were told by management their reservations would not be honored.

A hotel official, who refused to give her name, said Clark's aides told her that news media representatives should not be allowed to stay at the hotel.

When a Clark aide was queried, he replied that the hotel was overcrowded and Conservative officials were forced to share rooms.

About five minutes later, a reporter — without identifying himself — called the hotel and was told several rooms were available Wednesday night.

Earlier Wednesday at an Edmonton news conference, Clark said:

"I meant what I said at the start of this campaign. I consider your role as journalists . . . essential to democracy and I intend to be and I hope my government will be an accessible government."

Tuesday night as about 1,500 persons in Clark's election headquarters waited for him to give a victory speech, a Clark aide warned photographers that police would be called to remove them if they stood in front of the stage where Clark was to give his speech.

The photographers did not budge and police did not arrive.

Confrontation could be name of Clark game

By JOHN MARSHALL
FP News Service

EDMONTON — Consultation's always been his aim, but confrontation could be the game. Talk or shock.

And the man from High River who was dealt the highest cards in the House of Commons Tuesday made it clear Wednesday he was ready for both.

Joe Clark talked like he had a full house instead of a minority hand in the biggest game in town.

In a crisp bilingual press conference he said he was looking forward to a full term of government. But he also said he was going to go ahead as planned with his announced programs —including the controversial 60,000-person attrition cut in the civil service and the selling off of Petro-Canada.

He expected to make "no material changes" in his programs, he said, though the other leaders have said some are totally unacceptable.

His attitude called for a string tie, a cheroot, and one of those macho stetsons most of his aides — walking tall — bought when they and their range boss hit his big-country home province.

"I'm making it very clear now my intention is to carry out the programs for which we have a mandate and I would expect, looking back on the history of these things, that the other parties will first of all find it in their interest and secondly consider it to be fair to give a new government the opportunity to govern."

He was admitting no compromises, apparently reading in his opponents the fear of the position they might be in if they precipitated an election for an already election-wary public. That's his wild card. He's obviously betting on it heavily.

It was in his obviously well thought-out opening statement to the press conference that he said he was looking forward to a full term of government.

He was questioned particularly about what is obviously one of his biggest problems — his lack of any strength in Quebec. He said little that he had not said before.

He would select cabinet from within the House of Commons or the Senate — and in the latter case, he noted again, there was one vacancy and that others could open and that there were special provisions in the BNA Act which could permit him to appoint additional members.

He did make it clear he would not appoint anyone from outside the parliamentary system.

And to a question about how a cabinet minister not in the House of Commons could be made answerable to the House, he said there was no problem. It would be through a parliamentary secretary or another minister named for that responsibility.

As to what kind of francophones he would bring in from Quebec he said, "I am not going to insist naturally on an association with the Conservative party, that (with a smile) rather narrows the draw in Quebec, but naturally I will take account of some of the very excellent people who have stood as candidates or otherwise supported the Progressive Conservative party."

He said he could not speculate now on how many he would bring into his cabinet from Quebec. "If there is a limitation on numbers it will be compensated for in influence."

He has a surplus of representation across the country, but in talking about Quebec, it was like a card player drawing to a straight — looking for a hole card. He played the role well.

When it came to the vital Quebec unity question and the upcoming referendum there, he said he would be consulting with Claude Ryan, leader of the provincial Liberals.

And he said he would also consult "other well known federalists in Quebec regarding the positions that would be appropriate for a national government to take.

"As to the exact nature of that program, we will have to wait some days, perhaps weeks."

He pointed out that Quebecois members of his party's national executive and his committee, which has been planning for a transition into government, are also going to be consulted during his strategy sessions in Jasper this week.

As he does so easily, he turned a joke on himself, saying supporters in that province were "in good spirits, considering we did not sweep the province."

He was asked if his promises of a multitude of consultations with provinces, individuals and groups on many issues, and his promises of greater freedom for private members and the Opposition in parliament would not consume so much time that things might "bog down."

He contended more responsibility for more people would in fact bring efficiencies. But: "Some things might be slowed down and I think that the only areas that are slowed down are the things that should be."

The 39-year-old-prime-minister-elect came on hard in one additional point, though there was really some card-playing posturing as he slammed this card on the table.

He pointed out that, as is customary, Privy Council officials were coming to Jasper to brief him and his colleagues for the government change-over.

He said he was going to take the opportunity "to state formally my expectation that there will be no new expenditure obligations, no new personnel obligations or other commitments undertaken on behalf of the government until my colleagues and I have an opportunity to review the accounts of Canada."

A little gratuitous, but in Michael Pitfield, clerk of the Privy Council, he will be dealing with one of the men who has been, if not dealing, at least cutting the cards for the Trudeau administration.

The Nixon image tagged to new PM

Times News Services

Two of the more-thoughtful London newspapers compare Joe Clark, Canada's prime minister-elect, to Richard Nixon, disgraced former president of the United States.

The Daily Telegraph says Clark "is often compared by Canadian commentators — not entirely fairly — to Richard Nixon."

"He has Nixon's pragmatism, the same ability to unite a fractured party by meticulous staff work; the same desire to run a tightly controlled, television-oriented political campaign in which chance encounters with the voters are best avoided."

The Guardian rings a variation on the same theme.

"One persistent image springs to mind," The Guardian says: "It is of Richard Nixon. Under pressure, there is that mirthless laugh, the baring of the teeth which conveys a message quite contrary to the apparent expression."

In the more-frivolous press, the Daily Express — in a long profile on Maureen McTeer, entitled After Madcap Maggie, Meet Mighty Mo — says "she is said never to forget critics of her husband."

In a direct reference to the old Watergate scandal, The Express says "she is reputed to have an enemies list so large that the Clarks are rumored to be building a lift (elevator) to get the stuff up and down for bedtime reading."

Canada, meanwhile, is pictured in the New York tabloids as a country in grave danger, even more politically fragmented in the wake of Tuesday's federal election.

First foreign test for Joe

OTTAWA (CP) — Joe Clark faces his first test as prime minister on foreign soil in about a month when he meets the heads of the seven major industrial democracies in Tokyo.

Clark will have two days of intensive economic discussions with U.S. President Jimmy Carter, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain, President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France, Chancellor Helmut Schmidt of West Germany and Japanese Prime Minister Masayoshi Ohira.

The June 27 meeting will be Clark's first international venture since his ill-starred world trip in January.

That trip began with a four-day visit to Japan. Clark and Japanese Foreign Minister Masumi Eskai agreed there were "vitually boundless trade opportunities for their two countries." But their weighty trade discussions were overshadowed in Canada by reports of Clark's awkwardness.

Clark cannot afford any such embarrassments this time. He will be the focus of attention for 50 reporters and cameramen.

The Tokyo talks will put a different kind of pressure on Clark. Japan will be appealing to the other participants to establish a permanent association.

Before the judge

A 17-year-old Victoria girl will be sentenced Friday on two counts of breaking and entering and one of possession of stolen property.

Cheryl Ann Smith, 2324 Dowler Place, pleaded guilty Wednesday before Judge William Ostler in provincial court to break-ins March 12 and May 16 and to possession to a large number of bicycle parts.

The girl, who was remanded in custory, was jointly charged with 17-year-old Barry Allan Safnuk, 830 Gladiola, with the May 16 break-in at a Belton Street residence.

Crown counsel Richard Law withdrew two counts of theft under $200 and two more counts of possession of stolen property.

Law said city police interviewed Smith at her residence May 17 and she admitted the break-ins. In the first entry, a portable radio and between $25 and $35 in cash were taken. In the second, $16 in American money, a pair of panty hose and a bottle of liquor were taken.

He said police found three 10-speed bicycle frames, 16 bicycle wheels, a bike tire, seven bike seats, a handle, a set of front forks, a sprocket and pedals in Smith's basement.

He also asked Ostler to note that Smith was known to consort with juveniles, including an 11-year-old who has been identified as an accomplice on one occasion.

The judge remanded Safnuk until next Wednesday for election of his trial method.

Two drivers who pleaded guilty to their second conviction for a drinking-driving offence were given 15-day jail terms by Ostler.

Neil David Weaver, 27, of 1222 Goldstream, drove with a blood-alcohol content over .08 April 29.

Court was informed Weaver was involved in an accident on Sooke Road, east of Metchosin Road just before 10 a.m. and subsequent readings of .19 and .17 were obtained by Colwood RCMP. Weaver had been convicted of impaired driving in Campbell River Feb. 16, 1977, and was fined $300 then.

David Brett Callaway, 27, of 584 Ledsham, pleaded guilty to impaired driving and was given the same sentence.

Law said Callaway was stopped at 3 a.m. April 10 driving south on Jacklin and readings of .16 and .15 were obtained by Colwood RCMP. Callaway was fined $400 on May 19, 1978, for impaired driving.

Fined $350 for impaired driving was 22-year-old Donald Robert Hansen, 131 Gorge East.

Planes added

A third 19-passenger Twin Otter float plane has been put into service by West Coast Air Services Ltd. on its downtown-to-downtown Victoria-Gulf Islands-Vancouver service.

And a fourth aircraft will be added in June to handle increased traffic, company chairman Lynn C. Thow said Wednesday.

Hearing display at Hillside

Winning entries in the Hearing Awareness Poster Contest for children and teen-agers, as well as technical aids used by the deaf and hard of hearing, are on display in the Hillside Mall today, Friday and Saturday.

Winners of the poster contest in the three categories were:

Shootup 'foolish, drunken prank' - Drake

Going on a shootup after a drinking bout was a Sooke man's "foolish, drunken prank," county court Judge M.L.T. Drake said Wednesday.

He suspended sentence on Norman Robert Lund, 28, who pleaded guilty to dangerous use of a firearm by shooting an 8mm. rifle carelessly near residences and the Sooke River Hotel at 9:30 p.m. last June 28.

Lund was placed on probation for a year, during which he is prohibited from drinking alcohol.

Court was told Lund went with friends to the hotel pub about 6:30 and got into an argument with one of them, trying to hit him with a chair and allegedly making threats.

When Lund was escorted from the premises by the hotel manager, he was seen to walk quickly over the Sooke River bridge towards his home on nearby Durban Road and shortly afterward was seen shooting in the neighborhood and aiming toward the hotel. About 10 shots were fired.

When police arrived at Lund's home they found him passed out on his bed with the loaded rifle.

Counsel Brian MacKenzie said the friends later supported Lund, including the man who had been the target of abuse, describing the event as an isolated occurrence.

Lund, who had a previous record for impaired driving, volunteered to forfeit the rifle.

Drake said what Lund did was "out of character, a foolish, drunken prank and unlikely to occur again." He confiscated the rifle and ammunition seized by police.

Criminal warned of 'habitual' label

A lengthy criminal record brought a Victoria man to the brink of jail as an habitual criminal, county court Judge M.L.T. Drake said Wednesday.

He sent Frank Edward Waters, 35, to prison for nine months, "an appropriate sentence" on conviction for using a credit card belonging to Ken J. Jones of Ganges.

When he heard Waters' extensive criminal record in Ontario and three western provinces, including numerous theft, fraud and false pretences offences, Drake said:

"With this record you stand in danger of being convicted of being an habitual criminal."

When Waters pleaded guilty to the charge, a second count of being in possession of a credit card was stayed by the Crown.

Prosecutor Peter Birkett said police received a complaint at 11 p.m. May 7 of a man using a stolen credit card and when they checked Kingston and Oswego in James Bay they approached a man who said, "You got me."

"Are you the guy with the credit card?" an officer asked.

Waters admitted he was and gave to police a Chargex-Visa card from the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce. He had found it on Gorge Road, he said.

Shortly before he had presented it in payment for $18.65 worth of food and drink at the Ravens restaurant, Harbor Towers, and previous to that for $18.90 lodgings at James Bay Inn.

Police said there were indications the same card had been used since it was reported missing by Jones on March 22 to obtain value totalling $3,500 in Victoria, Vancouver and Calgary.

Counsel Brian MacKenzie said Waters has an alcohol problem, and noted that he had co-operated with police.

Add a surprising and tasty touch to your ham

Spring bouquet of glazed ham

Here's a clever idea for glazing and decorating a ham that will make it as colorful and attractive as a spring bouquet of flowers.

The zesty glaze of pineapple juice, prepared mustard and brown sugar is made in minutes, yet also doubles as a sauce for the ham.

Just bake the ham as usual and brush on the glaze toward the end of the cooking period. Then, using these suggestions, simply cut pineapple slices into daisy shapes and garnish the ham.

In a jiffy you can combine the remaining glaze and pine apple with a sprinkling of coconut, for a tropical-size sauce to spoon over the slices of ham. This variation of the traditional pineapple sauce will add a surprising touch to the meal.

Fresh tender asparagus with lemon butter and a Mushroom Potato Casserole are ideal accompaniments to this ham dinner. The potato dish bakes in the oven along with the ham, leaving you free to tend to last minute details.

To complete your dinner, serve a spinach salad with sliced egg garnish, crusty rolls and a glass of rose wine. Strawberry shortcake served for dessert is a delightful treat, this time of year.

GLAZED HAM

1 boneless ham, 8-10 lbs.
1 can (19-oz.) sliced pineapple
2 tsps cornstarch
3 tbsps brown sugar
3 tbsps prepared mustard
Whole cloves
¼ cup flaked coconut

Place ham, fat side up, on rack in shallow pan. Bake in 325° oven 2½ to 3 hours, or until meat thermometer reads 140°. Drain and measure juice from pineapple; add water if necessary to make ¾ cup.

Combine juice, cornstarch, brown sugar and mustard in small saucepan, stirring until smooth. Heat to simmering, stirring occasionally. Stud ham with cloves; brush with glaze. Bake 30 minutes longer, until glazed. (If desired, turn oven to 400° during last 10 minutes to brown more.)

Using three slices pineapple, trim to make petal shapes. Arrange on ham. Cut remaining pineapple into thin wedges; add to remaining glaze along with coconut. Serve over sliced ham.

Prepare your favorite recipe for scalloped potatoes. Before baking, stir in one small can mushrooms, drained and two teaspoons parsley flakes.

Strengthened

OTTAWA (CP) — Agriculture Canada is strengthening its assistance to consumers and food processors by bringing together its food and nutrition staff, the director of the new service says. Dr. Norm Tape says that under a new program, the ministry will provide more information to consumers.

Pregnancy jokes aside . . .

The perennial popularity of jokes about cravings for chocolate ice cream and pickles during pregnancy makes it seem as if they have been around forever. But little quantitative study of the development of food aversions and cravings for foods during pregnancy has been done.

In a recent study, 250 mothers were interviewed immediately after delivery concerning their dietary changes during pregnancy. More than a quarter of the women who regularly drank coffee, soda, or alcoholic beverages reported diminished consumption in the first half of pregnancy, according to Ernest B. Hook writing in The American Journal of Clinical Nutrition.

Decreased coffee ingestion was attributed mainly to the provocation of nausea or loss of taste for the beverage. Concern for the infant or the mother's health (e.g., weight control) were cited more often as a reason for the drop in ingestion of soda or alcoholic beverages.

The most striking increase was in milk consumption. Many mothers cited a craving for milk rather than concern for the infant as the reason for the increase.

The most pronounced cravings for other foods included in the study appeared to be for dairy items (including ice cream) and sweets (including chocolate and fruits). Those cravings may possibly be related to the increased need for calcium and calories during pregnancy.

However, in spite of the increased need for protein as well, none of the women reported craving foods typically eaten for their protein value (aside from the milk). Indeed, the main expressed food aversions were to meats and poultry.

Sauces flavored with oregano were also frequently avoided.

As for the pickles, cravings were reported more often than aversions, but the reasons for this remain obscure.

Vitamin C can do the disappearing act

Food for Thought

By Dr. MAYER and
Dr. JOHNNNA DWYER

Q. I recall reading somewhere that vitamin C is the most perishable of the vitamins. If that is true, how can potatoes be advertised as a good source of vitamin C?

A. You are quite correct. Vitamin C is fairly perishable. In fact, the amount that a serving of potatoes actually contains can vary considerable from what is listed in a table of food composition.

One important reason involves storage. A 3½-ounce freshly-dug potato (incidentally, that is quite a small tuber) can contain as much as 50 milligrams of ascorbic acid. That's slightly more than the total daily adult requirement. But stored for several months, that same potato will yield as little as 10 milligrams.

The other bit factor influencing the amount of vitamin C is, of course, the way the potatoes are prepared. Potatoes cooked in their skins retain more of the vitamin than those which are peeled and cut into small pieces.

As the ads say, a medium baked potato — that's about two potatoes per pound when raw — provides about two-thirds of your day's ascorbic acid requirement. And that's certainly a respectable amount.

Q. Could you tell me what tapioca is and what its food value is?

A: Tapioca is a starchy product made from the cassava or manioc root. Even though an important food crop to much of the world's population, cassava leaves much to be desired. It contains very little protein, and the protein is of poor quality. It also contributes few other nutrients even when consumed in large quantities.

The vitamin C in the freshly harvested root is destroyed by processing. Moreover, the root contains a poisonous compound, hydrocyanic acid. While processing removes most of it, the small amount which may remain is believed to cause chronic cynaide poisoning in individuals who get most of their calories from cassava.

In the U.S., tapioca is sold either in coarse granular form or in pearls of varying sizes and is used mainly as a thickening agent. Two tablespoons, enough to thicken four servings of pudding, contain about 60 calories, virtually all of them from carbohydrates.

We might mention that tapioca is of some value as a thickening for sauce and gravies for individuals who are allergic to wheat or who have gluten-sensitive enteropathy and must avoid wheat, rye, oats and barley. You can substitute two teaspoons of quick-cooking tapioca in place of one tablespoon of wheat flour.

I recently heard a rumor that some fast-food chains beef up the protein content of their hamburger by adding worm meat. Could this revolting story actually be true?

A: Not on your life. Every other consideration of business ethics aside, any such action could only be the result of a corporate death wish on the part of the company concerned. Many people feel that the Food and Drug Administration acts far too slowly in some matters. Take, for example, the long period before red dye No. 2 was finally banned.

The FDA, however, takes an extremely dim view of any adulteration of our food supply, whether intentional or by accident. In these cases, it acts firmly and with great dispatch. Indeed, a few companies have been driven into bankruptcy when they were forced to recall large quantities of foods suspected of contamination.

Creole: it's not French

By PIERRE FRANEY

Most professional chefs that I know are amused with the idea that the creole cooking of Louisiana in general and New Orleans in particular has a solid French foundation.

While it is indisputable that the French influence is present in that highly specialized form of North American cookery, it is, in some of its terminology and in practice, anything but a carbon copy of the French.

That is by no means to disparage creole cookery. Far from it. The gumbos, the fabulous assortment of oyster dishes such as Rockefeller and Bienville, the trout Marguery as made in New Orleans are excellent. But they are regional and admirable creations.

Consider one classic case. A true remoulade sauce in French cookery is made with a mayonnaise base to which is added mustard, anchovy paste, capers, chopped cornichons and herbs.

The most popular remoulade sauce in New Orleans is served on shrimp remoulade. That version is made with an unthickened oil and vinegar base — a salad dressing really — to which is added chopped scallions, celery, parsley, Creole mustard and paprika. And sometimes, anchovy paste. Perhaps it is nitpicking but that, in basic French terminology, is more a ravigote than a remoulade.

One of the best, tastiest and most easily made of Creole dishes is Shrimp Creole. This starts with a combination of chopped onion, green pepper and celery (the base of a good many Creole dishes). Plus tomatoes. It is definitely not French although it could be vaguely related to the Midi or Provence in France where red, ripe tomatoes abound.

Shrimp Creole is an ideal dish for sixty minute cookery. When the vegetables are simmered briefly (they must retain their texture), the tomatoes are added and cooked for a short time. The shrimp are cooked separately, the two elements are combined and that — with the addition of that traditional Southern seasoning, Tabasco — is all there is to it. Serve with a platter of simply made boiled, buttered rice (in French kitchens we call that riz Creole) and that is a very good balance.

SHRIMP CREOLE

1¼ lbs. raw shrimp in the shell
4 tblsp. butter
2 cups finely chopped onion
2 tsp. minced garlic
1 cup chopped celery
2 cups green pepper, cored, seeded and cut into one-inch cubes
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
3 cups fresh tomatoes cut into small cubes or use an equal amount of imported tomatoes
4 tblsp. finely chopped parsley
1 bay leaf
Tabasco sauce to taste

1. Peel the shrimp and remove the intestinal on the back. Set it aside.

2. Heat half the butter in a saucepan and add the onion and garlic. Cook about five minutes without browning. Add the celery and green pepper. Add salt and pepper to taste.

3. Cook about four minutes, stirring often. Do not overcook. The vegetables should remain crisp.

4. Add the tomatoes, parsley and bay leaf. Cover. At the boil cook about ten minutes. Add Tabasco sauce to taste.

5. In a skillet heat the remaining butter and the shrimps. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Stir. Cook only about one minute or until the shrimp lose their red color.

6. Spoon the tomato mixture over the shrimps and stir. Bring to the boil. Serve piping hot with Creole rice.

Yield: Four servings.

RIZ CREOLE
(Boiled Rice)

4 cups water
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 cup long grain rice
1 tblsp. butter
1 tsp. lemon juice

1. Bring the water to a boil in a saucepan and add the salt and rice. When the water returns to the boil, let the rice boil vigorously in the water.

2. Let cook exactly seventeen minutes. Drain in a colander and run hot water over it.

3. Add the butter, salt and pepper to taste. Srinkle with lemon juice and toss until grains are coated.

Yield: Four servings.

When he came to Nova Scotia in 1604, Samuel Champlain brought with him a mining engineer by the name of master Simon. It wasn't long before Simon justified his presence on Champlain's expedition, by discovering deposits of iron and silver.

The determination that characterized yesterday's search for minerals is still very much in evidence today. As one might expect, though, mining technology has improved considerably. This has resulted in drastic changes in the miner's work and way of life.

Great changes in family life? Don't bet on it

By WILLIAM RICE

DALLAS (WP) — Grocers are suckers for surveys and projections.

Supermarket executives can track exactly what the public has been eating and how much the public has been spending. But in an intensely competitive business where continuing high volume is essential to profit, tomorrow's pattern is as important as today's.

Therefore, at least two among the dozen or more surveys offered at the annual Food Marketing Institute here recently are likely to cause some thumb-sucking among these in the industry who expect an era of great change in family living and eating habits.

National studies by Ladies' Home Journal and Women's Day magazines strongly suggest the opposite: that traditional patterns of family life are being followed. Families are dining together. Women continue to do the great majority of the grocery shopping, meal planning and cooking. Traditional foods such as roast beef and cake retain their popularity. And Americans seem to be more likely to seek slimness by skipping a meal or dessert with a meal than by adopting special diet.

Among the results: More than 80 per cent of those sampled had eaten dinner at home the previous evening, and for nearly 75 per cent it had been a family meal. Only 6 per cent of the respondents reported that their fmilies ate at home but at different times; yet multiple meals have been considered a major reason for fragmented families and possibly for poor nutrition.

Men, according to the LHJ survey, aren't playing nearly the role that has been claimed for them. Women did 94 per cent of the shopping, with the husband going along fairly often but acting as the "primary shopper" only 4 per cent of the time. The same percentage of men prepared breakfast, but only 2 per cent of dinner preparation "was done by a husband on his own."

Working women may have changed their shopping patterns to fit the twin constraints of less time and (due to inflation) less disposable income. But what draws them to supermarket hasn't changed very much.

Demographic breakdowns of the survey show:

— Working women shop less frequently than homemakers, skip breakfast more frequently, eat more expensive foods and entertain guests for dinner more often.

— High-income families (more than $25,000) not only spend more money for food than low-income families (less than $12,500), they are more likely to plan meals ahead, buy more kitchen gadgets, are less likely to eat three meals a day and the high-income husband is far less likely to do the shopping than is the low-income husband.

If you've ever dealt with a relative's estate you know how frustrating it is to search out bank accounts, insurance policies and other important papers. So, for your family's sake, make a list of these documents — to save frustration and possible money loss from unknown accounts or insurance policies — should something unexpected happen to you. Give a copy to a relative, attorney or good friend.

In one square foot of growing space, you can have one eggplant, cucumber, tomato or bush squash plant; or six lettuce plants bordered with radishes or scallions; or dozens of carrots. If you have plenty of daily sunshine on patio or sun deck, plant a few deep pots, buckets, barrels, baskets or wooden boxes and save on food costs. Fertilize often for a bountiful harvest.

Made-in-China pill for men

A new male contraceptive pill, derived from cotton seed, is now being tried in the United States. Originally, the compound, gossypol, was used successfully in China. There it was found that this male contraceptive was more than 99 per cent effective.

In addition to its value is the fact that it can be stopped at any time without affecting fertility. The drug now is being actively studied, in order to be sure that there are no secondary side effects.

Researchers in America have been trying for many years to develop a male contraceptive pill. This new drug may open up new horizons for finally attaining their objective.

Many people who are sensitive to insect stings have had such bad experiences that they live in a dread of being bitten again. So great is the fear, in fact, that many highly sensitive people spend their summers living indoors for fear of exposure to insect bites.

The Food and Drug Administration recently announced that new desensitizing extracts are now being made from the actual venom of wasps, hornets, honey bees and yellow jackets. These new venom extracts, made in Upsala, Sweden, are far more effective than the "whole body" extracts that are now available for preventing serious reaction to a sting.

your health

By L. L. Coleman, MD

Dr. Lawrence M. Lichtenstein, of the Johns Hopkins Medical School, believes that this new insect venom may even be important in establishing permanent immunity to insect stings.

These new insect venom injections have recently been licensed for marketing in the United States. This is a great contribution in preventing the severe, and even life-threatening, reactions that occur among extremely sensitive people.

Severe irregularities of the heart present a problem to patients and to the doctors who are called to treat them. Some of these irregularities that have not responded to the drugs that are now available are markedly, benefited by a new drug, extensively used in Europe, which is now being tried in the United States.

Not only is it promising for its ability to control "arrhythmias" (irregularities of the heartbeat), but also is valuable because it is unusually long-acting. In fact, the drug's action is said to persist from 10 to 45 days after a patient stops taking it. It is given in a single daily dose. In some instances, it has been used once a week with excellent effect.

The preliminary studies on humans are being monitored carefully by those who are now investigating the value ot his potentially important drug.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Our 22-year-old son has had his own apartment for nearly a year. His girlfriend recently moved in. She is 21. We aren't very happy about, it but at least they told us themselves rather than let us hear is from friends.

The girl's parents slso live in this city, We have never met them and have no idea how they feel about their daughter living with a fellow without marriage.

Should we make any effort to meet the girl's parents? I have heard that if a couple marries and the parents haven't met, the groom's parents should make the first move to meet the parents of the girl. Is this correct? And does it apply to live-ins, too?

We have a married daughter. When we invite her and her husband to dinner, should we include our son and his live-in friend just as though they were married, too?

Please help us, Abby.

RESPECTABLE PEOPLE

DEAR RESPECTABLE: When you invite your son to dinner, invite his girlfriend, too.

Make no overtures to the girl's parents until (and unless) your son suggests it.

DEAR ABBY: Women recently set up a howl because hurricanes were being named after them. Considering the destructive nature of hurricanes, they had a legitimate beef. To satisfy the women weathermen started calling hurricanes "himacanes" and even named some after men. Last year there was a beaut off the coast of Mexico which was called John.

Well, John happens to be my name, and it has already been badly abused.

John was a perfectly respectable name until women started using it to refer to the toilet. Then street-walkers began calling their customers "johns."

Also, when a woman wants to break off a relationship with her boyfriend, she writes him a "Dear John" letter even though his name might be Harry.

I object.

JOHN

DEAR JOHN: Object if you will, but Johns have also been honored over the years. We've had popes named John, kings named John, and four presidents named John. And don't forget the Johnny-come-latelys. Objection overruled!

DEAR ABBY: Susie found a pair of silk panties in her husband's pickup truck and would like to meet the chick who's fooling around with him.

What makes her so sure it's a chick? Maybe it's a rooster. Susie's husband could be macho-straight when he's with her, but a transvestite who enjoys fondling feminine underthings now and then, either alone or in the company of another rooster.

JOE

DEAR JOE: Rooster or chick — it's a fowl situation.

Chinese cuisine fits today's pace

MONTREAL (CP) — Chinese cooking may be one of the world's oldest, finest and most complex cuisines, but it's also ideally suited to today's hurried lifestyle.

That's the view of Susanne Monet, who has made herself expert at a wide variety of Chinese dishes.

She makes many a last-minute Chinese dinner for her five-member family. And she and her husband Amedee, judge of the Quebec Court of Appeals, frequently entertain friends a la Chinoise.

The trick, she says, is advance preparation.

Just as a hostess will cook a casserole in advance to be free for the party, Mrs. Monet chops her way to freedom before the first guest comes in the door.

All ingredients for each dish are ready for last-minute cooking, often with labels on each serving platter. Three or four minutes before guests are summoned to the table, she heats up her wok and starts the first of a series of exotic Chinese recipes.

"Take for example, shrimp in black bean sauce, she says. "I'm with my guests while the casserole simmers ready for the shrimps to boil in one minute.

"The whole dish doesn't take any more time to make than if you were making a sauce for a steak."

Mrs. Monet says: "When a Chinese recipe says 'cook two minutes,' it means two minutes. And if it's undercooked, it's nice.

"And nothing in Chinese cooking is difficult. It's just different from what you've been used to."

She began to get used to this culinary art after a five-session course at the Chen School of Art where Chinese cooking is taught by demonstration.

Mrs. Monet followed up each session with home practice and believes this is why she was able to learn the new cooking technique.

How to chop is the key lesson, she says.

"When you slice the vegetables in a certain way, you always slice the meat in the same way, too. When you slice the vegetables in slivers, you slice the meat in slivers. When you cut the vegetables in cubes, you cut the meat in cubes."

The reason for this technique, she says, is that the harmonious appearance of the food is vital in this cuisine.

Here are some of Mrs. Monet's tips to beginner Chinese cooks:

— Read and re-read the recipes and line up all the ingredients. Shop shortly before you cook so foods are fresh — bean curd and sprouts, for example, stay fresh only a few days.

— Reconstitute dried foods like mushrooms and other fungi by soaking in water for two hours. If you can't put your knife through a moistened mushroom then it's no good and should be thrown out.

— Shrimp may be thawed (if frozen), shelled and deveined and put in the refrigerator until needed. But they must be cooked only at the last minute for maximum flavor and texture.

— In recipes calling for sliced meat or poultry, try slicing them partly-frozen — it's easier.

— Be sure your knife or cleaver is sharp before you start chopping.

Chop slowly at first — "be careful, I still chop my nails."

— Angle your knife blade away from you on to the chopping board, positioning it against the knuckles of your other hand so it stays at the same angle as you work.

I'm innocent, says Lance

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Bert Lance, once so close to Jimmy Carter that he was sometimes called the "deputy president," says he is eager for his day in court on charges of bank fraud, conspiracy, and misuse of funds at two Georgia banks.

"I know that I am innocent," the former U.S. budget director said in a statement Wednesday after he and three northwest Georgia businessmen were indicted by a federal grand jury.

"I have an infinite faith in the fairness of the American people, and I know that no jury will find me guilty of the charges directed against me," Lance said.

The indictment, which makes no mention of Carter, concerns Lance's banking practices before he resigned the presidency of the National Bank of Georgia to serve eight months in the Carter administration in 1977.

It alleges a conspiracy to commit banking violations and fraud against agencies of the government from 1970 to the present. The indictment said the conspiracy "has resulted in losses and potential losses in excess of $500,000" to the banks involved.

Lance's first appearance in court might come as early as today. He is to be arraigned before U.S. Magistrate Allen Chancey, but officials still had not announced the details early today. A trial might follow within 90 days.

Lance, who had been a major fund-raiser in Carter's presidential campaign, came to Washington as director of the Office of Management and Budget when Carter was inaugurated in 1977. For a time, they had lunch together twice a week and consulted daily by telephone. They had been political associates since 1966, and when Lance resigned on Sept. 21, 1977, an emotional president announced it.

Now Lance is charged in 22 of 33 counts in an indictment. If convicted on all counts, the maximum penalty would be 95 years in prison and a fine of $115,000.

Mercenary says tanks guarding Amin on farm

NAIROBI (AP) — A U.S. soldier of fortune says deposed dictator Idi Amin is back in Uganda, hiding out in a well-fortified farm near his hometown in Uganda's West Nile district.

Daniel Pierre Waltner, leader of a 15-man mercenary commando team hired to find Amin by a prominent Israeli, said Wednesday he saw Amin from a distance near the town of Arua earlier this month while on an intelligence-gathering mission.

Amin, he said, was guarded by about 500 well-armed tribesmen and frequently left the area in a plane piloted by a white man, presumably for a foreign destination.

During several trips into the West Nile heartland, Waltner said, he estimated between 3,000 to 6,000 pro-Amin troops were marshalling forces to defend the area from the final onslaught by Tanzanian army and Ugandan government forces, who have captured almost all the rest of the country.

He said the pro-Amin soldiers were armed with sophisticated weapons, including a number of tanks.

All information gathered by his team, he said, was later turned over to authorities of Uganda's provisional government, although the team was hired for the job by an Israeli member of parliament.

"We saw him on one of his farms in northwestern Uganda," he said. "There were large numbers of bunkers all around the farm and it was heavily defended.

"Our primary mission was to locate Amin and find out his movements, troop strength and accessibility. Our second, was the possibility of kidnapping him and turning him over to the Ugandan government and our third, the possibility of shooting him."

Draft-Kennedy action irritates party official

WASHINGTON (AP) — A group of Democratic congressmen say they have a candidate for U.S. president in 1980 — Edward Kennedy.

Kennedy says there already is a candidate — Jimmy Carter.

And John White, the Democratic party chairman, says if all this keeps up, whatever candidate the Republicans come up with in 1980 will win the election.

In a surprisingly strong reaction to the unauthorized draft-Kennedy move by four liberal Democrats in the House of Representatives, White denounced them for taking it "upon themselves to drive a wedge into the party ranks."

The chairman said that "the only real result will be to cause discord, disharmony and maybe even a defeat for the party in 1980."

At the White House, press secretary Jody Powell said: "I think it would be nice if the president could make his decisions in a way that is always pleasing to every individual or faction within the Democratic party and the whole society. He cannot do that. His responsibility is to make decisions that are in the interest of the entire nation."

Kennedy reacted to the latest effort to draw him into the 1980 race with his familiar response that he expects Carter to be renominated and re-elected and that he intends to support the president.

WASHINGTON (AP) — An unusual coalition of liberals and conservatives joined forces Wednesday to reject a compromise 1980 target budget, leaving stunned Democratic leaders in the House of Representatives scrambling to piece together a new package.

The defeat of the spending proposal, on a 260-to-144 vote, reflected liberal anger over concessions to the Senate's higher levels for defence spending and lower amounts for social programs.

Conservatives objected to the over-all spending levels as too high.

Within minutes of the House vote, Representative Robert Giaimo (Democrat—Conn.), the budget committee chairman, met with his Senate counterpart, Edmund Muskie (Democrat—Maine), to discuss ways of approving a target budget before the long Memorial Day weekend.

Giaimo and Muskie are reported to have discussed the possibility of the Senate's amending its budget proposal to meet some of the liberals' objections.

If such an arrangement cannot be worked out, the target budget will go back to a House-Senate committee.

The compromise target budget called for $532 billion in spending and a $23 billion deficit for fiscal 1980, which starts Oct. 1. The spending proposals were close to those recommended by President Carter.

The compromise was reached last Friday when House conferees accepted higher Senate spending levels for defence and agreed to cuts in social programs, favored by liberals.

Tornado twists off city roofs

WESTMINSTER, Md. (AP) — A tornado ripped through the main business district of this northern Maryland city of 7,100 residents Wednesday evening, blowing roofs off about a dozen buildings and causing extensive damage, state police said.

Maryland State police said no injuries were reported.

Several stores were severely damaged.

U.S. finds itself placed on limb over Rhodesia

LONDON (WP) — U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance ended his talks here Wednesday, on notice that the Anglo-American plan for Rhodesia is dead and that the United States must find a substitute approach to what Vance called the "new reality" of the explosive Rhodesian situation.

That was the bottom line of Vance's discussions with Britain's new Conservative Party prime minister, Margaret Thatcher, and her foreign secretary, Lord Carrington.

Although everyone involved characterized the talks as very friendly, the discussions still ended with the British resolved to pull out of the co-operative plan that has been the cornerstone of the Carter administration's policy for dealing with the racial conflicts of southern Africa.

Under that plan, forged in co-operation with the former Labor Party government here, Washington and London had refused to deal with Rhodesia's white-dominated transitional government, while insisting on a solution that would include the black guerrilla forces fighting the Salisbury administration.

"I would have to say that there is a new reality," Vance said following his final meeting with Carrington. "We must recognize that there is."

His words immediately triggered a flurry of speculation that the United States plans to follow Britain in moving toward recognition of the recently elected black-majority Rhodesian government to be headed by Prime Minister-elect Abel Muzorewa.

However, U.S. sources in Vance's party were quick to insist that his remarks were misinterpreted. They said Vance only was referring to what one called "the new situation on the ground there" — namely that the Salisbury government, despite intense disruptive efforts by the guerrillas, had managed to hold elections that produced a black-majority government and that President Carter will have to take that factor into account in deciding what to do next about Rhodesia.

Under legislation passed by Congress last year, Carter must determine whether the elections were sufficiently free and fair to warrant lifting U.S. economic sanctions against Rhodesia and move toward co-operating with Muzorewa. Congressional pressure for him to take that route has built up to the point where the Senate last week called overwhelmingly for an immediate end to the sanctions.

Now the Thatcher government's withdrawal from the Anglo-American plan seems likely to intensify the pressure. Until now, the administration had been able to justify its Rhodesia policy, in part, by arguing that Rhodesia, as a breakaway British colony, was primarily a British problem and that the United States was co-operating with the way in which Britain wanted to handle the situation.

Carter, who is expected to make a decision on sanctions in June, now must decide whether the changed situation justifies continued U.S. shunning of the "internal settlement" that produced the Muzorewa government. Up to now, his policy has been based on a belief that any lasting solution to Rhodesia's strife must include the guerrillas and a fear of antagonizing the black African countries, which support the guerrillas.

These are still questions of great concern to U.S. policymakers. But the president now must weigh them against the possibility that Britain's change of direction could snowball into a rush of other Western countries recognizing Rhodesia — a situation that would leave the United States increasingly isolated and put Carter in danger of being overruled by Congress.

Yet, while the president obviously is in a tight spot, U.S. officials with Vance insisted that his talks with Carrington had gone well and that the British decision had not caused any acrimony between the two governments.

These sources explained that Vance knew in advance that the government here was bound by Thatcher's campaign promises to move toward recognition. As a result, the sources said, Vance came here not with any idea of trying to talk Carrington into sticking with the Anglo-American plan but to seek ways of making the breakup as harmonious as possible.

In that respect, the sources insisted, the talks went very well. Carrington, who publicly announced the British policy on Tuesday, promised to move toward recognition in slow stages that will minimize the immediate pressures on Carter, and Vance, in a bow to Carrington, publicly denied a British press report Wednesday that the United States had argued strongly against the Thatcher government's course.

Black guerrilla threatens U.S.

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Black Rhodesian guerrilla leader Joshua Nkomo said Wednesday a decision by Britain or the United States to lift economic sanctions against the southern African country would make them enemies of his movement "and we will deal with them as such."

In London, U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance appeared to close ranks with Britain over the decision to send a British envoy to Rhodesia, which some interpreted it as the first step to recognition of the breakaway colony, which declared independence from Britain unilaterally in 1965 to head off black rule.

In Salisbury, the first black-dominated Rhodesian parliament was formally established with the election of 10 black and and 10 white senators.

At his news conference at UN headquarters in New York, Nkomo said he doubts the United States or Britain would lift sanctions, since that would be against their own long-term interests.

Regarding the U.S. Senate's recent vote which favors abolishing the sanctions, Nkomo said: "The Senate has a ritual of doing the wrong thing."

He added: "The United States has blundered in the past in supporting crumbling regimes. In its own interest it should avoid such a mistake in Rhodesia."

Nkomo said he expects the government of black Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa to collapse when he is unable to stop the six-year old war with the Patriotic Front, comprised of Nkomo's Zambia-based fighters and those of Robert Mugabe in Mozambique.

Asked about his break with Muzorewa, a one-time ally, and whether he would be willing to negotiate with him now, Nkomo declared Muzorewa has betrayed the independence movement and "one does not deal with traitors."

Nkomo said the constitution under which Muzorewa was elected contains quotas for the Rhodesia's 6.7 million blacks and 240,000 whites and thereby entrenched racism in the system.

Twenty-eight of the 100 seats in the lower house of parliament are reserved for whites, who also will control the judiciary, security forces and civil administration for five years.

Nkomo said Britain knows what an election should be and would never recognize the voting in Rhodesia as an election.

Britain is sending an envoy to Salisbury next Tuesday.

Many observers say they believe the emissary is Britain's first step toward recognizing Rhodesia, the subject of international sanctions since 1965 when outgoing white Prime Minister Ian Smith declared the colony independent in a move to head off black majority rule. That eventally touched off the lingering and bloody guerrilla war.

Skull smashing plot told court

LONDON (Reuter) — An alleged hired assassin told a jury Wednesday how he planned to use a heavy masonry chisel to smash the skull of Norman Scott, the man who says he was seduced by former Liberal party leader Jeremy Thorpe.

Scott survived a murder plot which a trial prosecutor says was instigated by Thorpe, who has pleaded not guilty to incitement and conspiracy to kill.

Testimony was given by Andrew Gino Newton, an airline pilot who was allegedly hired to do the job.

He has grown a beard since a pre-trial hearing last November, but he still gives evidence in a weak, plaintive voice and spices it with jokes which fail to raise a laugh.

"Getting hold of Deakin was as difficult as getting an audience with the Pope," he said Wednesday, referring to slot machine dealer George Deakin, another defendent.

Deakin is alleged to have recruited Newton to the plot and told him to kill Scott in the town of Dunstable.

In fact, said Newton, the intended victim was in another town, Barnstaple.

Put on the right track by David Holmes, best man Thorpe's 1968 wedding and alleged manager of the plot, Newton said he telephoned Scott. He said he posed as an agent of an Italian fashion house seeking a model. Scott once worked as a male model.

Newton said Scott agreed to come to a London hotel, and "I purchased some flowers and a chisel." The flowers were to smuggle the chisel through the lobby to Scott's room.

"I proposed hitting him on the head with the chisel to kill him in the hotel room," said Newton. "But he did not turn up."

Deakin and Holmes have pleaded not guilty to conspiracy to murder.

4 babies die after vaccination

NAPLES (AP) — The sudden deaths of four babies, aged between 15 months and 2½ years, prompted health authorities today to suspend all dyphtheria and tetanus vaccinations.

Officials said the four babies died only days after undergoing the double vaccination.

Authorities said the bodies will undergo autopsy to determine the precise cause of death. Samples of the vaccines also will undergo laboratory tests.

The officials said 80 children who underwent the vaccinations on the same days are in good condition.

The four, three girls and one boy, died at a hospital after vain attempts to save them.

Their deaths come 2½ months after the last certified death of at least 77 victims of what became known as the mystery disease of Naples.

The disease was finally identified as an influenza-type virus which can be fatal to undernourished children. The 77 deaths were spread over 13 months from February 1978 and initially vaccines came under suspicion as a possible cause.

However, after a series of tests, doctors ruled out any connection between the vaccines and the deaths.

Canadian gas lures visitors

DETROIT (AP) — Motorists in the Motor City aren't driving to desperation for gasoline. If they can't get it here, or the price doesn't suit them, they breeze over to Canada to fill up their tanks.

Michael Wondergem, manager at the Canadian government office of tourism in Detroit, said there has been a noted increase in the number of Americans driving into Canada to buy gasoline, with the highest increase at the Detroit-Windsor border.

"Nowhere else along the border do we have such a large concentration of people as we do there," he said. "It's not that there isn't gas in Detroit, it's just the prices are so high."

By his estimate, gasoline prices in Canada are only about two cents less a gallon after figuring in money exchanges, quantity differences and toll charges both ways, and he said he doesn't think it's really worth it.

Gasoline in Canada is sold by Imperial gallon, which contains about 20 per cent more than the U.S. gallon. In addition, the U.S. dollar is worth 15 cents more in Canada than it is here.

From Detroit, it costs $1.50 to cross the border round trip.

New oil rap for Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Democrats in the U.S. House of Representatives today formally approved, by a 138-to-69 margin, a resolution opposing President Carter's plan to lift price controls on domestic oil.

House Speaker Thomas O'Neill, whose home state of Massachusetts is heavily dependent on heating oil, openly broke with the president in supporting the motion.

The action, ratifying a voice vote taken Wednesday, is not binding. However, backers said it is an important symbolic gesture from within the president's own party renouncing his decision to raise U.S. oil prices.

It clearly adds momentum to the drive in both the House and Senate to approve legislation that will block Carter's decision to begin lifting price controls June 1.

Such a move is expected to be made on the floor of both chambers within the next few weeks.

Today's vote by the House Democratic caucus comes at a time of mounting congressional discontent with oil companies, rising fuel prices and gas shortages.

Three Senate conservatives who consistently side with the oil industry on major energy votes today urged Energy Secretary James Schlesinger to hire a private, outside auditing firm "to conduct a full and complete examination of the oil companies."

The request came from Senators Bennett Johnston (Dem. La.), Paul Laxalt (Rep. Nev.) and Pete Domenici (Rep. N.M.).

"This is the best way to alleviate the persistent and nagging questions surrounding the current oil situation, circulating among the American people," the senators said in a joint statement.

Thatcher appoints UN envoy

LONDON (Reuter) — Britain's new Conservative government today named Sir Anthony Parsons, a top foreign office official, as its permanent representative to the United Nations.

Parsons, 55, will succeed Ivor Richard, who was appointed under the former Labor government. Richard resigned earlier this month.

A Middle East specialist, Parsons was ambassador to Iran for five years until returning to the foreign office last January.

Rome hit again by rightist bomb

ROME (UPI) — A powerful bomb apparently set by an extreme rightist group severely damaged the marble and concrete Italian foreign ministry early today, police said.

The bomb, similar to ones that blew up Rome's city hall and main jail, hurled huge blocks of marble and limestone off the ornate building and blew out most of the windows.

No injuries were reported.

Most severely damaged was the second floor of the west wing of the ministry, designed during the pre-war Mussolini Fascist era. The building is patrolled day and night.

A man called the Rome newspaper Il Tempo shortly after the blast and said the Popular Revolutionary Movement was responsible.

This new organization, believed by counter-terrorist police to be an extreme rightist group, also claimed it bombed the Michelangelo-designed city hall atop the Capitoline Hill April 20 and the downtown 16th century Regina Coeli (Queen of Heaven) jail May 14.

It also planted 90 sticks of dynamite in a car on a central Rome square Sunday, but police dismantled the device three minutes before it was set to detonate.

In other attacks early today, a jeep was blown up in the center of Rome.

Don't call them TV 'movies'

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

Scott's World

HOLLYWOOD — Ross Hunter, who has produced 46 major movies for theaters, begs you not to call films-made-for-television "TV movies" because they are a far cry in every way from the genuine article.

Hunter established himself as a first-rate filmmaker at Universal with such movies as Airport, Pillow Talk, Back Street, and Midnight Lace.

A couple of years ago he switched to TV, naively assuming he could produce films of theatrical quality for the tube. Instead he got an education in frustration and frugality.

He produced four of the better "TV movies" for NBC — The Money Changers, A Family Upside Down, Suddenly Love and most recently The Best Place To Be which will be telecast in two segments April 27-28.

His budget for the quartet was $10 million, a pittance compared to feature film costs.

Hunter hoped to lend big screen stature to his projects by signing well-known movie stars, paying movie salaries.

Among his stars were Fred Astaire, Helen Hayes, Kirk Douglas, Donna Reed and Christopher Plummer. He attempted to bring the same meticulous attention to detail to TV screens that he had to his splashy features.

Hunter employed 63 different sets for The Best Place To Be and prevailed on Hank Mancini to write the score. He also spent $3.5 million.

"But no matter what anybody does," said the disenchanted producer, "it's not the same thing as a feature film."

Hunter was at home suffering a case of shingles he said was brought on by nervous tension and pressures he incurred putting together the new project. It was originally scheduled to be telecast in the fall.

A month ago he was told to have The Best Place To Be ready to go immediately. Hunter worked 18 hours a day in the editing rooms cutting the film to get it ready in time for the "May sweeps," an end-of-the-season rating device to check on how the networks measure up.

"Time, not money, is the element that separates movies made for TV and a real, honest-to-God feature film," he said. "You can always cut budgets, but you can't cut time. Nobody can write or produce well under duress.

"We devoted 10 weeks to this picture. If I'd made it for theatres, we'd have had seven or eight months. The cost would have been $12 million instead of $3.5 million.

"By comparison, The Best Place To Be was leisurely. Most TV pictures are made in 15-17 days. People on the set don't know each other. The actors don't know the director. There's no time for rehearsal.

"Television locks you into a time frame. You are alloted exactly so many hours, minutes and seconds to accomodate commercials and programming demands.

"If I'd made The Best Place To Be for theatrical release, it would have run two hours and 15 minutes instead of four hours.

"Fortunately, I was able to rehearse the cast a full week. But it's still not the same."

Hunter's switch to television was not purely an artistic challenge. NBC offered him all theatrical rights to his four pictures after two showings on the network.

He's released The Money Changers in theatres abroad and reaped a box-office harvest. He expects to do as well or better with A Family Upside Down. It won Emmys last year for Astaire and for best TV film of 1977-78.

"I really believed it was possible to prove the best way to entertain the American public was in their own homes with good movies," Hunter went on.

"In the past two years I discovered people have become very choosy about what they expect from entertainment. They'd rather see one quality film than 10 mediocre ones."

What bothers Hunter is that no matter how worthwhile a movie for the tube may be, if it's opposite such stalwarts as Laverne and Shirley or Mork and Mindy it will go straight down the tubes.

"I can understand that," he said. "Viewers are striving to get away from the stress and strain of everyday living and reality. They want the bright, romantic side of life.

"My reputation is based on so-called 'women's pictures,' romantic dramas in beautiful settings. All four of my films for TV were of that genre.

"Of the hundreds of movies made for TV and the big screen each year only three or four are women's pictures. The rest are dedicated to violence, or sex, and sex, to my way of thinking, was never meant to be an arena sport.

"I'm going back to genuine movies. TV has been a killer.

U.S. stars score high

CANNES(AP) — U.S. director Francis Ford Coppola's Vietnam epic Apocalypse Now today shared the award for best film at the Cannes Film Festival with the West German movie version of Gunther Grass's bestselling novel The Tin Drum.

U.S. director Terence Malick won the best-director award for Days of Heaven, a morality tale set in turn-of-the-century Texas.

Jack Lemmon was named best actor for his role in The China Syndrome, a U.S. film about an accident in a nuclear reactor.

Another American, Sally Field, won the best actress title for her role in Norma Rae, about an attempt to unionize a textile plant in Alabama.

A special jury award was granted to Siberiada, a Russian film describing 60 years in the lives of two families living in Siberia.

Stefano Madia won the secondary-acting award for his role in Italian director Dino Risi's Caro Papa. In the female category, Eva Mattes was honored for her acting in West German Werner Herzog's Woysek.

Film-makers Probed

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The U.S. Federal Trade Commission Wednesday announced the first major investigation into the multibillion-dollar movie industry since the 1940s.

The purpose of the probe is to determine if major film makers are banding together to shut out smaller independent producers.

The main targets of the investigation are the six major movie producers and distributors — United Artists, Universal, Paramount, Columbia, 20th Century-Fox and Warner Bros.

The probe is specifically aimed at determining whether the major film makers' export association is engaged in anti-competitive practices and if the recent growth of "joint ventures" among the big motion picture companies "may unduly restrict competition."

The investigation, being conducted by lawyers in the FTC's Los Angeles office, could lead to civil suits against the film makers or a report to Congress suggesting legislation to remedy any problems.

Opening lead — queen of hearts.

It happened in Dead Man's gulch many years ago. Twelve men, good and true, listened attentively to the evidence. It seems that East — in a fit of rage in the middle of a rubber — suddenly pulled out his six-shooter and let his partner have it. East was promptly hauled into court before judge and jury and tried for murder.

The facts were not disputed. The defendant (East) told his story and it was confirmed by the two other surviving players as well as two kibitzers.

It was agreed that South got to six notrump on the bidding shown. The fact that six diamonds was laydown was not even discussed. The district attorney obviously thought this was irrelevant.

The deceased, a strictly orthodox player, led the queen of hearts. Declarer won with the king and saw that he could not make the slam without dummy's diamonds. So he led a diamond and finessed the queen.

The defendant smoothly played the eight and dummy's queen won the trick! East had quickly come to the conclusion tht he could not defeat the contract unless South could be induced to take another diamond finesse. In that case, dummy's diamonds would become useless and the slam would go down.

It is impossible to state categorically whether East's ingenious play eventually would have succeeded. After the diamond queen held, South cashed five club tricks. The deceased followed to three rounds of clubs, next discarded a heart and then a diamond.

South immediately led a diamond, but even before he could play the ace and catch East's king, three shots rang out.

If you were in the jury box and had to cast a ballot, how would you vote? Guilty? Or would you say it was justifiable homocide?

Tomorrow: Double-dummy problem.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Friday, May 25
BY SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Requests, relatives in transit, expansion of horizons, accelerated social activity crowd your scenario. Be active, versatile while trying to avoid spreading efforts too thin. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Check details, sources — money is involved. Be specific, draw the line, create style or policy. Cycle is favourable for collection debts. Aquarius, Scorpio persons play key roles. Be aware of budget, financial commitments and potential.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your best qualities, assets surge forward — sense of timing is on target. Cycle high — other factors blend to make this a day of perception, added popularity, knowledge — and love. Yes, a "special person" plays a "special role."

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Secret meetings, corporate structures, getting behind the scenes, exchanging confidences — these are featured. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio natives figure in scenario. Play cards close to chest — be discreet, alert.

LEO (July 23—Aug. 22): You learn more about your aspirations, desires, wishes — and about yourself. This could be a period of introspection. Pisces, Virgo person figure prominently. A friend could become a "romance partner."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Business, production, profession, fulfillment of ambitions are highly placed on agenda. Capricorn native plays a significant role. By accepting added responsibility, you also increase reward factors. Stick with number 8.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Long-range view is emphasized. Perceive potential. Refuse to be limited — the sky is the limit! You get results. Your beliefs, policies are vindicated. An aggressive, go-getter type could become a valuable ally.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You get reinforcements, more courage, confidence — and love. Money picture comes into focus. Partner or mate confides — and clears the air. You're rebounding from recent, emotional setback. This is good — congratulations!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Hunch pays off — one who taught you in past will make reappearance. Aquarius, Cancer, Leo natives figure in scenario. Accent on contracts, publicity, joining forces with one who has your best interests at heart.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Go slow, maintain steady pace, keep resolutions connected with employment, nutrition. Check medical-dental appointments. One who shares your interests — or hobbies — helps in resolving dilemma. You'll celebrate!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lunar aspect promotes romance, creative endeavors, relationships with children, "luck" in speculative ventures. Stick with number 4! Scorpio, Taurus, Leo persons play key roles. Imprint your own style.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): State facts, be aware of subtle nuances, fine print. Be frank in appraisal of situation. Refuse to be intimidated by one who make promises — and threats. Dig in, secure position, make it clear you intend to protect your turf.

IF MAY 25 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are introspective, mentally alert, active, restless, have a tendency to brood and to be your own severest critic. Pisces, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. June could be your most significant month of 1979, a year featuring family, home, marriage, getting on more solid emotional footing. You get "facts of life" next month. You encounter dynamic, exciting romantic situation in August. You are versatile, an individual to your fingertips, independent and have a tendency to scatter your forces.

Sleep on dear good mother, it has been long years

Since you left our hearts filled with sadness and tears

Yours was a heart that was blithesome
and gay

Scattering sunshine all along the way

You know how we love you and, yes,
love you yet

Though God took you from us,
we cannot forget.

309 IN MEMORIAM

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Turn on brain, then sprinkler

GARDENING
jack beastall

On our local clay-base soils it has been determined that plants require a minimum of 76.2 millimetres (three inches) of rainfall a month for good growth, or 25.4 mm (one in.) every 10 days.

One 25.4-mm rainfall approximates 22.7 litres (five Imperial gallons) of water to every square metre of soil.

Checking my records, April was a dry month with only 23.8 mm of rain, less than one-third the amount needed for our plants, and during the first 20 days of May the rainfall was down to 16.8 mm instead of the 50.8 mm needed.

Thirty-five years ago, two of the top-ranking advisors on home gardening, Horace Whiteoak who contributed to the local press under the pen-name Quercus Alba (the White Oak), and Cecil Solly of Seattle, whose articles were syndicated here, were seriously concerned because gardeners fail to start a regular watering schedule in April.

Today's gardeners are no different. The need of plants may not be immediately evident but the natural water level in the soil drops rapidly when winter rains cease. Early watering in April helps to maintain moisture at and below root level.

When the home gardener waits for signs, such as browning of grass and wilting of shrub foliage, many times as much water is necessary to penetrate the dry subsoil and supply the needs of the plants.

In some instances, particularly with coniferous evergreens, feeding roots already may have died before brown tips appear on the foliage, while the recovery of other plants can be slow, or the plants may succumb.

On a clay-base soil, the gardener who starts watering in April on a 10-day schedule will, in a normal summer, be able to maintain the schedule until September, and not need to water every day — thus saving thousands of gallons of water.

There is no suggestion that the entire garden has to be watered on one day; in fact, such a feat would be impossible if the required 25.4 mm is to be applied.

In drawing up the schedule, the garden is divided into sections of convenient size, and each section receives its quota once every ten days.

Any heavy rainfall is deducted from the basic 25.4 mm, but watering is not postponed because the sky is cloudy or showers are in the vicinity.

When watering is done on a cloudy day, or better still during rain or showers, every drop applied goes into the soil, whereas on a sunny hot day up to 50 per cent of the applied water can evaporate and be of no benefit to the plants.

It is worth mentioning that applied water cannot be of benefit to plants unless the soil has sufficient humus to hold the moisture within the reach of the plant roots.

So many of us seem willing to pay high water bills and complain of the cost rather than investing in a load of old manure or mushroom compost and recouping its cost by the end of the season on the water that has not been needed.

Allowing the sub-soil to dry out and applying a token of water to dampen the surface every day is an excellent way to waste water, run up exorbitant water bills, and have plants that show the effects of being dry at the roots.

There will be exceptions to the 10-day watering schedule in every garden. For example, newly sown seed rows will require a light watering every second day, while the newly set out plants may need attention every five days. Deep watering is not required until permanent plants become established.

Each gardener has to relate the watering schedule to the soil and the plants being grown. In a plant nursery situated on a clay loam with compost added, watering once in three weeks was found to be perfect from early April until October, the sprinklers being turned on at 11 p.m. and left running until 6 a.m.

Overnight watering was necessary because of low water pressure during daylight hours.

Highway north to Beaufort Sea being kept something of secret

By ANDREW MALCOLM
New York Times

HUNTING CARIBOU and other wildlife is prohibited along new highway. Below, Ione Christensen, Yukon territory's first woman governor, in Whitehorse.

WHITEHORSE — After 22 years of construction and nearly $100 million in expenditures, the Yukon terrirotial government has quietly opened North America's first land road to the Arctic, directly linking the population centres of the United States and Canada with the vast mineral-rich wilderness areas north of the Arctic Circle.

Until now, the region's spectacular scenery and its resources have been reachable only by costly air transportation, by dog sled or by water around Alaska for a short period in summer.

But now anyone with wheels can drive the 460-mile Dempster Highway from a point near historic Dawson City north and east to Inuvik near the Beaufort Sea.

No one knows for sure the impact the project will have on the native population, the economy, the land and the wildlife, including a herd of 100,000 caribou that regularly migrates across the highway's route.

The road, with the accompanying spurs expected over time, will play a major role in the economic development of Canada's far north. It is certain to attract many developers, prospectors and drilling rigs in search of the kind of riches that made the nearby Klondike such ad attraction 82 years ago. The road could also provide a convient right-of-way for oil or gas pipelines from Artic deposits now being explored.

And many of the more than 300,000 tourists and hunters who visit the Yukon annually will likely be drawn by the woods, mountains and plains, packed with wildlife, as well as the adventure and still considerable danger of driving across the Artic Circle in the family station wagon.

Local conservationists have been protesting against the road for years. In meetings, rambling newspaper articles and letters to the editor, they voiced fears for the region's delicate environment, especially the unknown effects of regular motor traffic on the Porcupine caribou herd, one of the last large herds in the world.

The caribou, some with antlers towering more than eight feet in the air, are an important source of food for the natives. The animals spend their summers in northeastern Alaska and wander predictable patterns across the border into the Yukon each winter to forage and have their calves.

"We're talking about a lot of things happening up there that nobody knows about," said Jack Hibberd, a former minister of renewable resources.

Such protests, however, have received little attention beyond this undeveloped corner of Canada. The road was built piecemeal over the years far from any significant human habitation. It had the enthusiastic support of businessmen in both the Yukon and Northwest Territories. And it fitted the federal commitment of develop the north and improve Canada's energy self-sufficiency, a key policy of successive governments in Ottawa.

The governments have banned hunting along the entire highway and for five miles on both sides. Officials have promised to monitor the caribou herd for any ill effects and have not ruled out closing the highway for short periods or requiring all travellers to drive in convoys to minimize disruption of the herd. And they have sought to play down news of the road's existence.

But territorial government officials are determined to keep the road open year round, at an estimated annual 1.4 million.

"We will watch the environmental impact," Dan Lang, the Yukon's minster of highways and public works, said in an interview, "but we have to continue developing our resources. We are in the 20th century now and we have to expand our economic base."

Only in the Yukon would the new road be called a "highway." The territory, which is four times the size of New York State, has only 23,000 residents living slong 2,726 miles of road. But only 119 miles of these roads are paved; the rest, including the Dempster Highway, are gravel, which accounts for the protective steel screens in the front of so many vehicles here.

Named for Cpl. W. J. D. Dempster, a mounted policeman who found a missing patrol in the area in 1911, the new $97 million highway starts at Route 3 about 300 miles north of here. At first it meanders through virgin forest, then it climbs the Ogilvie Range, one of several rugged mountain ranges it encounters. Dipping into valleys and following ridge lines past spectacular waterfalls, the road moves north to the tundra above the treeline across two major bridges built by Canadian construction troops on exercises.

At times narrow lanes branch off, wandering for miles toward an abandoned gravel pit before stopping with no warning or space to turn around. At the halfway point there is one motel and gas station, the Eagle Plains Hotel.

Campgrounds are planned, according to Lang. But there are no other conveniences now.

B.C. turning into major funnel for narcotics

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Canadian and U.S. drug officers say the 35-ton shipment of marijuana seized by police northwest of Tofino Tuesday morning may be only a fraction of the amount being funnelled through the Pacific northwest.

Insp. Dave Staples, head of drug investigations for the RCMP in B.C. said in an interview the west coast is shaping up as a major alternate route for drug smugglers in the Caribbean and eastern U.S. seaboard.

"We began to realize about two years ago this was likely to happen," Staples said. "We've seen it manifested in the past year or so with several really big seizures."

They include a 37-ton shipment of marijuana intercepted by U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency officers in Puget Sound in late 1977, a 13½-ton shipment seized by RCMP north of Tofino last July and a large quantity of Thai sticks — a particularly powerful type of marijuana — found by DEA officers on Barnes Island in the San Juan Islands last year.

Tuesday's seizure of 35 tons and the arrest of 20 suspects was the biggest drug bust in Canadian history.

A spokesman for the DEA in Seattle agreed there is growing concern.

"It is certainly valid to speculate that because of the remoteness of the area and from the standpoint of marine attraction, new routes are being established here as the heat is put on smugglers in the Caribbean," special agent Bob Waltz said in a phone interview from Seattle.

"We know the same routes have been used in the past but we haven't enough intelligence established yet to give us an indication of the total amount which may be smuggled into this area of the northwest."

Waltz said an all-out war is being waged to stem the flow, with the DEA enlisting the aid of the Coast Guard, customs, U.S. Navy and even fishing boats to supply intelligence on the movement of smuggler boats plying west coast waters.

Satellite tracking systems are also being used to follow known or suspected smuggler vessels, and although the systems weren't used in Tuesday's case, they were instrumental in the successful police raid in the Tofino area last July 12.

Staples said talks are under way with American authorities to link up the DEA communications network with Canadian watchers.

He said the aim is to develop an early warning system and hinted some thought is being given to planting spotters at strategic points along the deeply indented, rugged shoreline of Vancouver Island.

"We want to get the message across to the dope-pushers in the U.S. and Colombia that we're going to make it very difficult for them in the future."

The task, however, is formidable, he said.

"I know of literally hundreds of places along the coast where even large vessels could come in and be completely hidden from view."

Staples said the Tofino area is a logical choice as a drop-off point.

"If you take a map and try to select an ideal smuggling area on the west coast the first place you'd pick is the area north of Tofino. It's isolated. There's little marine traffic. And there are plenty of places to hide."

Tuesday's enormous drug bust was the culmination of a lengthy police investigation initiated by DEA officers in the Seattle area.

Waltz said officers got word several months ago that a Seattle-based group was planning a large shipment. As a result a surveillance was set up on a mobile trailer home on Orcas Island.

In a raid that was simultaneous with the RCMP swoop, DEA officers burst into the trailer and arrested a man.

Waltz said the trailer was outfitted with a single-sideband transceiver and other sophisticated radio equipment.

The suspect, Roy David Thompson, appeared in court in Seattle Wednesday charged with using a communications facility to

Oak Bay Manor licence cancelled

The provincial government has cancelled the interim long-term care licence for Oak Bay Manor, a nursing home which has been attacked for what critics says is the inadequate quality of care for elderly patients.

The move means alternative accommodation will have to be found for 137 patients.

Critics of the manor said today they are happy with the government decision but added the Oak Bay Manor problem is just the "tip of the iceberg" and only one example of the government's lack of planning in the area of long-term care.

The cancellation of the manor's licence stemmed from an investigation by a five-member committee of the nursing home's operation and management.

The committee was made up of health officials from the Capital Region District and the Provincial Adult Care Facilities Licensing Board.

The committee was appointed by Health Minister Bob McClelland following the death Easter morning of two patients who fell out of bed while wearing restraining jackets.

A third women died in January after wandering out onto the roof of the manor.

Spokesmen for Oak Bay Manor were not available for comment this morning.

Maurice Chazottes, ministry of health spokesman, said today Neil Cook, owner of the nursing home, had been warned several times to bring the nursing home up to the requirements of the licensing board.

Cook took no action on things like providing proper fire exits, Chazottes said, so the committee decided the situation could continue no longer.

Chazottes said the problem with Oak Bay Manor, which opened in August, 1972, is that it was built to be a luxury retirement home and doesn't have the proper facilities to take care of elderly people who need attention.

He said the government has not imposed any deadline on when the patients must get out of the manor. The ministry is working on alternative accommodations, he said.

Chazottes admitted that adequate long-term care facilities are in short supply in the Victoria area but added construction has begun on facilities capable of handling 300 patients.

Gordon Hanson, newly elected NDP MLA for Victoria, said today he is pleased that the manor's licence has been cancelled because he is concerned about the level of supervision and care at the hospital.

He said it will no doubt be an inconvenience for those patients who have to be relocated but in the long run they will be better off.

Hanson said the Oak Bay Manor problem is just the tip of the iceberg.

The problem is the government has not planned its long-term care program properly, he said.

Now the ministry is in a bind, having to remove patients from inadequate facilities without having alternative accommodation.

Hanson said the NDP will soon be making an announcement on the problem of inadequate hospital care.

Diabetes-virus link discovered in U.S.

BOSTON (AP) — The death of a 10-year-old boy has given scientists the first proof that diabetes in children can be caused by a virus.

The discovery raises the possibility of the eventual development of a vaccine to prevent childhood diabetes, which is usually far more serious than the form of the disease that strikes adults.

Until now, the cause of juvenile diabetes was a mystery, although researchers have long suspected that it might be caused by a virus. Genetic inheritance and weakness in the body's immune system also have been viewed as possible factors.

The researchers who discovered the virus-linked disease are still uncertain whether the germ causes most cases of childhood diabetes or only the rare exceptions.

These scientists, working at the U.S. National Institute of Dental Research and the National Naval Medical Centre in Washington, found that the disease in one youngster was caused by a variation of the Coxsackievirus B4. This is a common virus that ordinarily causes flu and cold-like symptoms as well as inflammation of the heart.

An editorial in the New England Journal of Medicine, which published the study today, called the finding "highly important."

"We now have evidence that at least some cases of diabetes are caused by a virus," Dr. Marshall Austin, one of the researchers, said in an interview.

The form of diabetes that often strikes adults is probably not caused by the newly isolated virus, Austin said. The insulin deficiencies of these people usually are not as severe as those of victims who develop the disease in childhood.

However, he said much more research is necessary before scientists can begin to work on an anti-diabetes vaccine for youngsters.

The editorial, written by Dr. Allan Drash of Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh, said: "Prevention of diabetes may be achieved in some patients by immunization with viral vaccines."

The researchers said the virus attacks the beta cells — tissue imbedded in the pancreas that produces insulin. Without enough insulin, the body cannot keep proper levels of sugar in the bloodstream.

Broadbent, Clark huddle

Times News Services

Hints of a possible Conservative-New Democratic Party deal began to emerge today with reports that prime-minister-elect Joe Clark and NDP leader Ed Broadbent plan a meeting early next week.

Aides said today Broadbent plans no public statement about the position his 26-member caucus is in until after the meeting requested by Clark.

Broadbent returned to Ottawa Wednesday to prepare for the caucus session.

Although Conservatives are six seats short of a majority in the Commons, Clark ealier said he does not intend to negotiate an alliance to get a majority with either the NDP or the Social Credit party; the latter won six seats.

Not so reticent is Social Credit leader Fabien Roy who Wednesday set his conditions for supporting Clark.

Roy said his six Creditiste MPs will insist on Quebec's right to self-determination in constitutional matters, and will oppose any attempt by Clark to introduce federal referendum legislation to deal with Quebec.

"The rights of the provinces must be maintained and even reinforced, says Roy who is an advocate of an association of sovereign states to replace the existing Confederation. "Obviously this includes respect for the right of self-determination for the provinces."

Meanwhile, the process of transferring of power to Canada's new Progressive Conservative government began today with meetings in Jasper, Alta., and Ottawa.

In a secluded Rocky Mountain resort hotel, Clark was undergoing briefings from clerk of the privy council and secretary to the cabinet Michael Pitfield, who ironical-

Fort Street spraying riles environmentalists

The city's parks department began spraying trees on Fort Street today with the pesticide methoxychlor and almost immediately drew the ire of Derek Mallard, president of the Citizens Association to Save the Environment.

Mallard told the Times he had been called by two Fort Street residents who objected to the spraying. One apartment dweller, Mallard said, had reported feeling sick after the wind wafted some of the spray through a window.

Instead of using methoxychlor, Mallard said the city should use biological insecticides to control the winter moths.

Mallard said his trees were infected with the winter moths (loopers) but he controlled them with a spray mixture of an insecticide containing thuricide, garlic juice and ordinary household laundry soap.

Al Smith, the city's parks superintendent, said the program has the approval of the federal agriculture department and the Pollution Control Branch.

While methoxychkor can be dangerous if used in highly concentrated form, the spray dilution is not, Smith said. He said the aim is to control the winter moths,not eradicate them.

He quotes Dr. W. Howard Rapson, a chemist who has spoken out in favor of methoxychlor in the April addition of the Dow Canadian Insight.

N-blast . . . then the horror begins

By WALTER PINCUS

WASHINGTON (WP) — "Areas of the country such as the northeast corridor were reduced to a swath of burning rubble from north of Boston to south of Norfolk. Still there were some sections of the nation that were spared direct effects of blast and fire . . . Charlottesville . . . was not hit . . . Momentarily (it was) immune to the disaster that had levelled the cities of the nation."

But according to a newly released U.S. study by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment (OTA), Charlottesville's immunity is only temporary, a pause before the "race for survival" that will begin the day the survivors emerge from their fallout shelters.

This fictional attempt to describe what the world after a nuclear war would be like makes it clear that the atomic blasts would be only the beginning of the horror.

The study is certain to stir up controversy and become a focus of congressional hearings on the need for increased civil defence measures. It was prepared at the request of the senate foreign relations committee for forthcoming floor debate on the Strategic Arms Limitation Treaty.

The study envisions a massive Soviet nuclear attack that is not a surprise. Tension between the superpowers has prompted some people to flee major U.S. cities, and the day of the attack Charlottesville already has 40,000 evacuees from Washington and Richmond — a 50 per cent increase in the city-county population.

At the first alarm and emergency radio broadcasts most people go into shelters located in downtown underground garages and the basements of University of Virginia buildings. In the rural areas surrounding the city, some farmers do not want to leave their homes, and many suburbanites have stocked their basements with food and piled dirt against windows and doors.

Few are above ground to see the warheads land, but communications nationwide are interrupted as the earth's atmosphere shivers with the assault of the explosions, according to the OTA fictionalized study.

The Soviets have dropped 4,000 megatons, and close to 100 million Americans are killed. The U.S. counterattack on the Soviet Union has a similar devastating effect.

For more than an hour, nothing falls on Charlottesville, and stragglers are hustled into shelters by policemen in the streets.

Then fallout begins. University scientists pick up a 40-rem-per-hour rate an hour and a half after the attack. It quickly rises to 50 rem per hour and remains there for a full day before declining slightly. In four days, the Charlottesville area receives a 2,000-rem cumulative dose, enough to kill those people who refused to go into shelters and most of the animals left outside.

A 450-rem dose is considered to be fatal to half those who receive it. The largest

The bureaucracy law

There ought to be another law along the lines of the Peter Principle or Parkinson's Law. It should state that every project begun, no matter how small and narrow, has an intrinsic tendency to become larger, more expensive and more bureaucratic as it goes along. A corollary might be that this is especially true of projects that are funded by taxpayers' dollars.

Anyone who requires convincing should examine the educational needs commission set up earlier this year by the Greater Victoria school board. A better example couldn't be found.

It was to be composed of volunteers representing all segments of the community — students, parents, teachers, non-teaching staff within the school district and non-parent taxpayers — under a professional chairman, and was to report back to the school board by October on the educational needs it had discovered within the district.

The commission's report was to be one of the board's tools when it started debate in the fall on the tricky problems of declining student enrolment. Total cost of the commission was to be about $33,000, most of it a $16,000 salary for the chairman. Its other costs were to come out of existing district administration budgets.

From the beginning, however, it wasn't that simple. The process of choosing a chairman took weeks. The process of choosing the other six members of the commission took months and involved much political wrangling.

Now, following the laws of bureaucratic expansion perfectly, the commission is becoming more expensive, time-consuming and more bureaucratic.

The chairman, Bernard Gillie, is looking for $10,000 to hire outside researchers for the commission. The school board administration presumably has neither the time nor the money within its budget to do all the commission wants.

The chairman is also asking the board to provide honorariums for the other commissioners. He says they're spending a lot of time on the job. No doubt they are, but surely they understood it would be a time-consuming job when they volunteered to serve.

(To give the board credit, its planning committee is looking askance at all this extra expense.)

Last but not least, the commission chairman is also saying there isn't any way the commission can finish its work by October. It will probably go on another full year after that, he says.

All this extra time and expense might be worth it if the commission would, in the end, produce something of real value to the school district. We will have to wait many months to find out but a reasonable guess is that it will tell us little that we don't already know, that we have a community deeply split on educational issues, that some people want to save tax dollars and others want to spend more money.

Government is listening

How many times have you complained about the drivers who speed, the drivers who run yellow lights, the drivers whose cars are deafening in their loudness? Sometimes it seems an everyday occurrence on Victoria streets.

Like the weather, bad driving (always by other people, of course) is one of those things we always feel we can't do anything about. Well, here's your opportunity.

Tonight the provincial government's special task force on motor vehicles is meeting to hear the views of the Victoria public. The task force was set up under the attorney-general's ministry several months ago to undertake a thorough re-examination of all the laws regarding motor vehicles and driving in B.C.

It already published an interim report based on its own studies which raises questions about such basic matters as the effectiveness of the demerit point system and the need for tougher penalties for those who drive while their licences are suspended.

Now, as part of the second stage of its work, the task force is going about the province listening to the public and seeking ideas on how to improve the driving laws. Task force chairman Neil McDiarmid tactfully makes it clear that the group doesn't want to hear about individual accidents or run-ins with policemen. He hopes the public will stay with general issues and principles.

That can cover a broad range of topics. Just a few of the issues identified by the task force are:

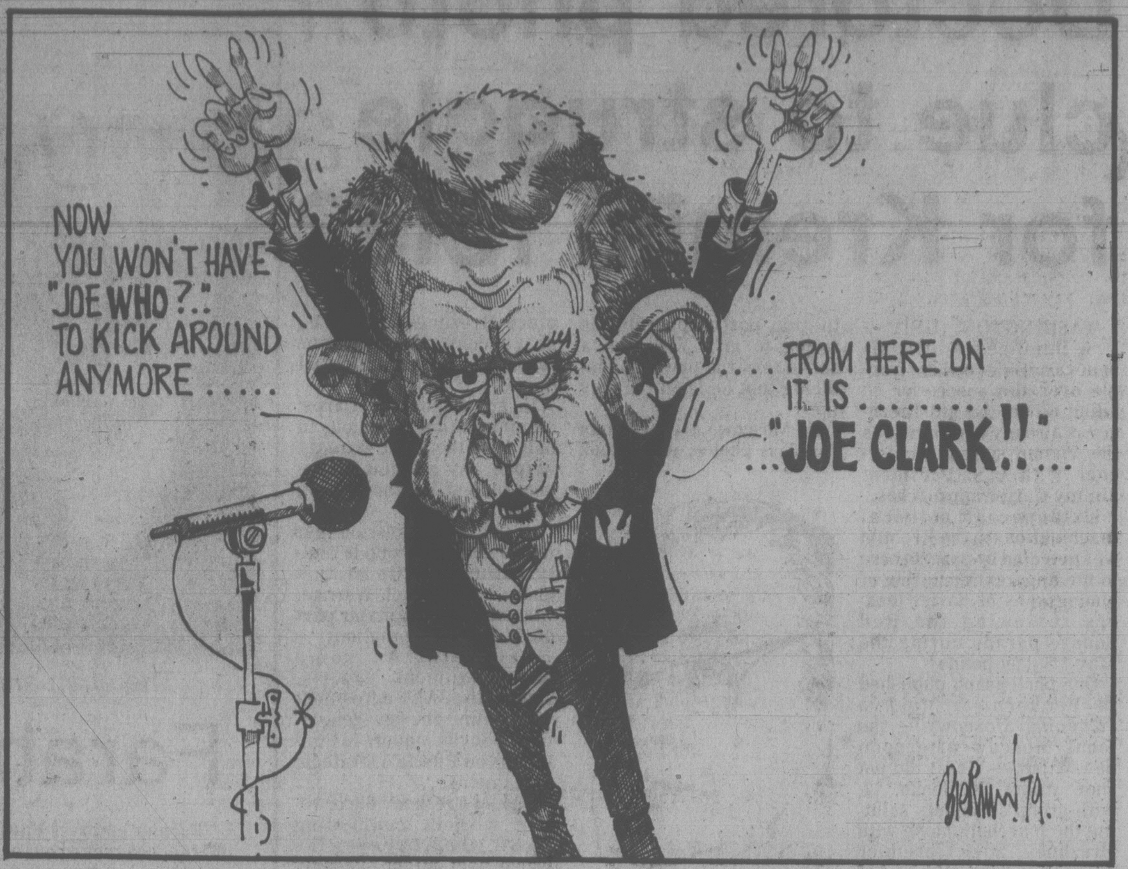
● What should be the minimum age for obtaining a driver's licence? Should the current age of 16 be increased to 18? Or reduced to 14? How about the problems at the other end of the age scale — what should be done about drivers longer capable of driving safely?

● What is the most effective way of dealing with drivers who break the law? Would an automatic fine be a better answer than the present system of demerit points? What should be done about drivers who continually flout the driving laws? Should any driving offences be considered criminal offences, leading to a criminal record?

● How should insurance premiums be related to driving records? Is there a better way than imposing heavy extra premiums once someone has accumulated six or more demerit points? What should be the relationship between the motor vehicle branch and ICBC?

● What about driver education? Should it be mandatory in the schools? Should more incentives be offered to people who complete formal driver education courses?

The meeting tonight begins at 7:30 p.m. at the Ingraham Hotel. The government is listening. All you have to do is speak up.



NOW YOU WON'T HAVE "JOE WHO?.." TO KICK AROUND ANYMORE.....

Ah, those wonderful stats

A few election notes from a statistician, possibly slightly demented following a 57-day campaign:

Looking first at local results, the consistency in voting patterns between the two main Victoria area ridings (Victoria and Esquimalt-Saanich) was remarkable.

In Victoria, Tory Allan McKinnon got 54.7 per cent of the vote. In Esquimalt-Saanich, Tory Don Munro got 54.6 per cent of the vote.

In Victoria, NDPer Gretchen Brewin got 30 per cent of the vote. In Esquimalt-Saanich, NDPer Bob Cameron got 28.9 per cent of the vote.

In Victoria, Liberal Bob Monaghan got 15.2 per cent of the vote. In Esquimalt-Saanich, Liberal Alan Peterson got 14.9 per cent of the vote.

The 1.6 per cent of the vote received by unaffiliated candidate Philip Ney in Esquimalt-Saanich makes up the difference.

Different up-Island

The figures were a little different in the third lower Island seat, Cowichan-Malahat-The Islands, which takes in Mill Bay, Cobble Hill, Duncan, and the Gulf Islands as well as Victoria's western communities. It is interesting that in this riding Liberal candidate David Anderson had been running a strong personal campaign, relying on his own reputation rather than that of his leader or party.

It did him absolutely no good. He gained only about one per cent more of the vote (a total of 16.1 per cent) than did Monaghan and Peterson, both of whom were virtual unknowns when their campaigns started.

The race in that riding was between the Tories and the NDP, with the Tories ending up with 43.5 per cent of the vote to 40 per cent for the NDP.

Further north on the Island, the NDP did pick up two seats (Nanaimo-Alberni and Comox-Powell River), but in neither case did they get a clear majority of the votes. Ted Miller won in Nanaimo-Alberni with 44.0 per cent of the vote, and Ray Skelly took Comox-Powell River with a similar figure of 44.4 per cent.

More interesting was the dismal showing of the Liberal incumbents in both ridings. Jack Pearsall didn't quite make 20 per cent of the vote in Comox, while Hugh Anderson just squeaked past that figure at 21.6 per cent in Nanaimo.

Across the province, the NDP did pick up seven seats, but in none did they gain an absolute majority of the votes. Their candidate who did best was Ian Waddell in Vancouver-Kingsway who gained 44.7 per cent of the votes cast. The two Vancouver Island winners were next in line.

The Tories, on the other hand, gained absolute majorities (more than 50 per cent of the total votes cast) in 10 of the 20 seats they won in B.C. Doing the best was incumbent Bob Wenman who gained 61.2 per cent of the vote in Fraser Valley West. He was closely followed by incumbent Frank Oberle in Prince George-Peace River with 60.6 per cent.

Across the country, Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau did the best of the four party leaders in his own riding. He took Montreal-Mount Royal with an amazing 85.2 per cent of the vote.

Joe Clark received 69.7 per cent of the votes in his Yellowhead riding, while the new Creditiste leader, Fabien Roy, got 57 per cent in Beauce in his first attempt at a Commons seat.

NDP leader Ed Broadbent did the worst of the four leaders, gaining just 51.3 per cent of the vote in the heavily unionized riding of Oshawa.

Trudeau's personal victory in Montreal, however, was just one of a number of huge triumphs for the Liberals in Quebec. (It really was the only province where they had any triumphs.) A long series of Liberal candidates gained more than 70 per cent of the popular vote, often in ridings with six or seven candidates. Health and Welfare Minister Monique Begin received 77.3 per cent of the vote in a seven-way race, for example, and incumbent John Campbell gained 75.1 per cent in another seven-way contest.

Even newcomers to the political scene, such as Louis Demarais, took 70 per cent of the vote. Demarais took 71.9 per cent of the vote and had a lead of 36,500 votes over his nearest rival.

Tory Alberta

But if Quebec belonged to the Liberals, Alberta belonged to the Conservatives. Not only did the Tories win all 21 seats in the province, but they also gained an absolute majority in all of them.

And it produced some of the most remarkable majorities of the election. In Vegreville, for example, incumbent Don Mazankowski racked up an incredible 88.3 per cent of the popular vote. That's the sort of lead normally attained only in official one-party states.

But others in Alberta weren't far behind. In Pembina, for example, incumbent Peter Elzinga collected 84.3 per cent of the vote.

The statistics could go on forever, but nothing will change the most important one — the one that gave the Conservatives 136 seats in the 282-seat House. For any others, ask your neighborhood computer.

Here's what Joe Clark and the Tories say they'll to do for you

Joe Clark won, and to refresh his and the voters' memories, here's what the Conservatives promised during the campaign and in position papers to do for in the first half of the 1980s:

AIR CANADA

☐ Get rid of PetroCan and Northern Transportation Ltd. and other unnamed Crown corporations by selling them to private enterprise. Force Air Canada to sell off the recently-acquired Nordair.

☐ Achieve energy self-sufficiency by 1990.

☐ Punish multinational oil companies which act against Canada's national interest with tighter environmental regulations and income tax investigations.

☐ Abolish the capital gains tax on common shares traded in Canadian companies.

☐ Introduce "sunset laws" and zero-base budgeting to provide annual review of basic government programs, not just proposed increases in spending.

☐ Get rid of the urban affairs department, and other unspecified agencies and departments which overlap provincial jurisdiction.

☐ Bring unemployment down to 5.5 per cent and cut inflation to five per cent by 1985.

☐ Reduce real growth in government spending to zero.

☐ Cut the civil service by 60,000 through attrition.

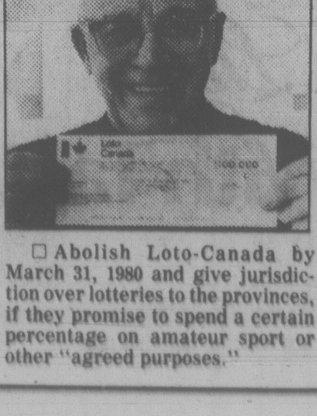
☐ Establish daycare centres in federal buildings and grant civil servants extended child care leaves.

☐ Achieve equality in income and status between men and women in the civil service by 1989. Tories believe in "equal pay for equal work."

☐ "We will experiment more widely with part-time and flexible work week arrangements" in the civil service.

☐ A Freedom of Information Act.

☐ On the constitution, according to the Kingston Declaration signed by him and the five Tory premiers, Clark wants "a constitutional limitation on the use of federal spending power in areas of provincial jurisdictions." He would also recognize provincial ownership of offshore minerals, share jurisdiction with the provinces for cultural affairs, and entrench the principle of equalization payments in a new constitution.



☐ Abolish Loto-Canada by March 31, 1980 and give jurisdiction over lotteries to the provinces, if they promise to spend a certain percentage on amateur sport or other "agreed purposes."

Kellogg's
CORN FLAKES
CORN FLAKES
Kellogg's
CORN FLAKES

☐ Change bilingual labelling regulations to allow English- or French-only packaging.

☐ Reduce the government's advertising budget by $50 million a year.

☐ Correct "serious flaws" in gun control laws which threaten legitimate gun owners with "arbitrary and undemocratic action."

☐ Establish a "framework of law" to allow the RCMP to break the law, with prior approval by a cabinet minister.

☐ Set up a Cultural Industries Development Agency to take over much of the Canada Council's work.

☐ Maintain marginal prairie rail lines until 1990, or provide "adequate alternatives" to move grain to market.

☐ Increase Canada's grain export facilities by 50 per cent within five years and modernize grain handling facilities at Vancouver, Prince Rupert and Churchill, Man. Subsidize the railroads if necessary to ensure they make a profit on grain.

☐ Call a national conference for the fall to set economic goals for Canada.

☐ Reform parliament to give the backbencher more influence, and allow Commons committees more independent investigatory powers.

☐ Pay direct subsidies of $1.25 an hour to employers to hire 120,000 young unemployed a year and centralize all youth job creation schemes in a Youth Employment Secretariat.

☐ Set up a national youth service corps of 15,000 young Canadians to work on community and environmental projects.

☐ Encourage national unity with cheaper air and rail fares, especially for the young.

☐ Promise investors a 150 per cent tax credit for new manufacturing investment in the maritimes.

☐ Abolish compulsory retirement at 65 in all fields under federal jurisdiction.

☐ Suspend or refuse to sign contracts with firms violating federal or provincial human rights legislation.

☐ Give Yukoners the right to choose provincial status.

☐ Deny foreign aid to countries engaging in military operations outside their borders.

☐ Provide new tax incentives in the mining industry to create 115,000 jobs in 20 years.

☐ Give small businesses a tax credit up to $5,000 for capital investment.

☐ Ensure an end to bank discrimination against women in granting credit.

☐ Allow homeowners to deduct mortgage interest and property taxes from their federal income tax, which will create 45,000 new housing starts and 100,000 jobs in its first year, Clark claims.

☐ Increase armed forces by 4,000 to a total of 83,000.

☐ Try to buy 78 F-14 fighter planes from Iran.

☐ Offer $15 million to the provinces for home care for elderly.

☐ Reduce the government's use of outside consultants by $250 million a year.

☐ Recognize Jerusalem as the capital of Israel and move Canada's embassy there from Tel Aviv.

☐ Aid dairy farmers by reducing the cheese import quota to 35 million pounds from 45 million pounds.

☐ Examine the establishment of a Public Interests Disputes Commission to help reduce the number of strikes.

☐ Immediately slash the federal sales tax on building materials.

☐ Index the capital gains tax and corporate inventory accounting for inflation.

☐ Require parliamentary approval for any new crown corporations or agencies.

☐ Improve immigration control measures at a cost of $1 million a year.

☐ Boost veterans' pensions by a total of $34.5 million a year.

☐ Give business a research and development tax credit, worth $125 million annually.

BRIAN HEANEY MOVES WEST

Guess who's No. 1 now?

By JIM CRERAR
Times staff

Once upon a time there was a conference called the Canada West that was the weak link in Canadian college basketball.

Each year the CWUAA sent its best team to the Canadian Interuniversity Athletic Union championships and each year, it seemed, the team lost in the first round, lost in the consolation round and quietly limped off into the sunset.

No more.

With the emergence of UVic Vikings and Calgary Dinosaurs as national basketball powers (both were in this spring's national finals), it's apparent that in the west, the sun also rises.

Next season, the sun will undoubtedly shine on the Alberta Golden Bears as well as the Vikings and Dinos because of the arrival of a new coach in Brian Heaney.

Heaney is leaving St. Mary's University Huskies in Halifax to coach the Bears and co-ordinate Alberta's 12-sport varsity program.

Basketball fans here are all too familiar with the Huskies, something of a nemesis to the Vikings. The Halifax school, in fact, narrowly beat UVic in the championship final at this year's CIAU tourney.

The championship was the third nationally for the Huskies under Heaney, a 33-year-old native of Brooklyn, N.Y., noted for his driving desire for excellence.

He single-handedly built St. Mary's into a basketball power after taking over as coach 1971 following an outstanding playing career there. His teams dominated the tough Atlantic Conference and made the national finals in 1973, '74, '75, '77, '78 and '79. They won the Canadian title in 1973 and the last two years.

What took Heaney to Edmonton?

"It's exactly what I was looking for," he says. "It's a challenging job but I think I'm equal to the challenge."

There'll be challenges, to be sure. One will come from coach Ken Shields' Vikings. Another will come from Gary Howard's Dinosaurs. And don't be surprised if a third comes from Peter Mullins' UBC Thunderbirds. The usually-tough T-Birds lost heavily through injuries and graduation last year and are certain to improve.

Dunn signs two-year contract

VANCOUVER (CP) — Assistant coach Dave Dunn has agreed to a two-year contract with Vancouver Canucks, the National Hockey League team has announced.

Dunn, 30, joined the Canucks prior to the 1978-79 season after Harry Neale was hired as head coach. Dunn had previously played in the NHL and World Hockey Association with various teams.

Two-tour concept for pro golf in '81

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) — Commissioner Deane Beman has announced that men's professional golf likely will start a senior tour in 1980 and will split its national tour into two segments by 1981.

Beman told a news conference that the two-tour concept had come from the players themselves and that the tournament players board had instructed him to set up the tour for the senior tournaments.

Beman said the major tour would consist of no more than 35 tournaments with purses of $300,000 or more. It would involve the top 100 players in the money list.

The secondary tour would have about the same number of events with minimum purses of $100,000 to $150,000.

"It was a great surprise to me that the players came to me in New Orleans earlier this year and felt the tour should be shortened and split into two segments, Beman said. "And the majority of players favoring it are not in the top 100."

Beman said he surveyed "in the neighborhood of 50 seniors," and the vast majority favored a separate tour for players 50 years and older.

He named such seniors as Julius Boros, Don January, Tommy Bolt, and Ken Venturi as favoring the seniors tour.

Beman said he thought the seniors tour could support a maximum of six events in 1980.

Wales in draw with England

WEMBLEY, England (AP) — Hardworking Wales surprisingly held England to a 0-0 draw Wednesday in the British soccer championship before 70,220 fans.

The draw gave Wales a chance to take the championship outright for the first time since 1937. Wales meets Northern Ireland on Friday and England plays Scotland on Saturday.

The England team, with Ken Sansom and Laurie Cunningham both making their debuts, had the ball often enough to have won comfortably.

The Welsh did little attacking but scurried effectively in mid-field and defended with determination to hold out against England's almost-total dominance.

San Diego fans help pay for Bill

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Less than two weeks after the addition of centre Bill Walton, pro basketball's most valuable player of 1977-78, San Diego Clippers have raised their ticket prices — with the best seat in the house now costing $11.

The National Basketball Association club announced the ticket increase Wednesday, raising the best seats by $2 while general admission was raised by $1.

Tickets for the 1979-80 season will be priced at $11, $9, $7 and $5, up from $9, $8, $6 and $4.

Irv Levin, the Clippers' president, said the "modest increase reflects our higher operating costs."

Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market rose moderately in active mid-afternoon trading.

Advances outnumbered declines 192 to 149 with 208 issues unchanged.

Trading in TransCanada PipeLines Ltd. resumed at 12:10 p.m. after an opening halt for completion of an offer by Dome Petroleum Ltd. for 10.6 million shares at $23 a share.

A total of 23,863,443 shares were tendered under the offer at the Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver and Alberta markets.

Dome Petroleum has agreed to take 140,800 shares above its offer so the tendered shares can be purchased on a pro rata basis of 45 per cent.

TransCanada PipeLines fell ½ to $21⅜ by 2 p.m.

Today's exchange volume figure is inflated by the number of TransCanada Pipeline shares traded through the Toronto Stock Exchange.

Among other industrials, Bank of Montreal gained ½ at $23⅛, Brascan A ⅜ at $24, CP Ltd. ¼ at $30⅝, Imperial Oil A ¼ at $29⅜ and Inter-City Gas ⅛ at $12⅞.

Melcor Developments fell ¼ at $14, General Motors 1¼ at $67¾, Andres Wines ¾ at $14, Celanese Canada ¼ at $5¼ and Chrysler ⅜ at $10⅛.

Placer Development rose ⅛ at $28, Cypris Anvil ⅜ at $14¾ and Campbell Red Lake ¼ at $23. Camflo Mines fell ⅜ at $14⅛ and Brenda Mines ⅛ at $16⅝.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were little changed in a sluggish session on Wall Street.

When automakers posted an aggregate 25 per cent drop in sales for the 10-day period in mid-May, the auto issues and other blue chips sold off.

The auto group was generally lower again. Ford Motor lost ¾ to $41⅝, General Motors was down ½ to $58½, and American Motors dropped ⅛ to $6⅜, while Chrysler was unchanged at $8¾.

Schering-Plough led the active list, off ⅛ to $29⅝. A 222,700-share block traded at that price.

Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Prices moved slightly higher in light trading on the Montreal Stock Exchange today. Bank of Montreal advanced ¼ at $22⅞, Calgary Power A ⅜ at $45⅞, CP Ltd. ⅛ at $30⅝, Gulf Oil ¾ at $49¾, and Imperial Oil A ⅛ at $29¼. Alcan was down ⅜ at $41⅛.
